Proceedings in the Commons—The Canadian Loan Bill.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 5—Midnight.

In the House of Commons to-night Mr. OTWAY, in reply to a question from Mr. BOWRING, said in consequence of a recommendation of the Official Committee the Government had declined to fill the vacancy in the British Consulship at Chicago.

Mr. STANSFELD moved the second reading of the Canadian Loan bill, which proposes to guarantee a loan of £300,000 for the purchase of the territory and rights of the Hudson Bay Company. Mr. STANSFELD said that in order to facilitate the adjustment of this question, which was of considerable importance in respect to the relations of England with America, and to promote the settlement of the territory, Her Majesty's Government undertook, in accordance with the pledge it had given, to propose this guarantee to the House.

Mr. MONK opposed the motion, and moved an amendment that the second reading be postponed three months.

Mr. DILKE seconded the amendment. He hoped the Government would lay down some clear, distinct policy with respect to colonial guarantees.

After some further discussion, the amendment to postpone the second reading was rejected by a vote of 65 to 10, and the bill was then read for the second time.

Reports from Revolutionary Sources—Outrages by the Volunteers in Puerto Principe—Skirmishes and Results—Expectations of the Cubans.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Aug. 5.

Advices from Cubans to their friends in this city, to the 26th ult., state that General QUESADA still has control of communication between the coast and Puerto Principe; that the inhabitants of that city are completely at the mercy of the volunteer soldiery, who are committing every description of outrage in the city and the country adjacent. It is now almost impossible to obtain supplies, and the suffering of the people is represented as very great. Fighting is reported at several points in General JORDAN'S department, where the Spanish troops have been reinforced by two regiments of volunteers and a battalion of regulars from Havana.

Near Santiago de Cuba the Cubans were attacked by a superior force of Spaniards, and at first were driven from their position with some loss, but they were rallied, and, reinforced by troops from General FIGUEROS' command, regained the position and compelled the Spanish troops to retire.

It is reported that a small foraging party of Cubans were captured near Remedios, and another near Sagua la Grande. The number of Cubans thus captured was eighty, and it is feared they were immediately executed.

The Cuban troops, it is reported, continue to be free from disease and in excellent spirits. The commanders are moving to take advantage of the present demoralized condition of the Spanish forces.

The letters containing the above information state that in twenty days decisive action will be taken in the Eastern Department, which will give the Cubans control of the affairs of that portion of the Island.

Council with the Chiefs and Counselors of the Osages—The "Sturgis" Treaty—Their Grievances to be Laid before the Authorities at Washington.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Thursday, Aug. 5.

A special dispatch from Lawrence, Kansas, dated the 4th inst., is to the effect that Hon. SIDNEY CLARKE, the Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, held a council with the Chiefs and counselors of the Osage Indians on Sunday last. Three of the five bands composing the tribe were represented. He informed the Indians that he had met them for the purpose of hearing what they had to say with regard to the treaty of May, 1865, known as the "Sturgis Treaty," whereby the Osages had agreed to sell their lands to STURGES, or the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston Railroad, for nineteen cents per acre. Thirty of the Chiefs and head men were present, and they insisted on denouncing the treaty as a fraud and a swindle. They claim that it was procured by threats and a promise of bribes to some of the Chiefs, and ask that it be not confirmed. They also complain that the annuities are not paid according to the treaty, and that when an agent visits them he fails to give all that is due. The whites are settling on their reservation and destroying their timber, which is contrary to the former treaties; and they are swindled and cheated on all sides. Mr. CLARKE has a report of their speeches, and will proceed to Washington for the purpose of laying their grievances before the President and Indian Bureau. There are upward of fifteen hundred white settlers on the reservations, and hundreds are going there every day.

The Susquehanna Railroad Case—Judge Barnard's Injunction Served.

ALBANY, Thursday, Aug. 5.

Mr. SHERMAN, of the firm of FIELDS & SHERMAN, of New-York, arrived in this city today with injunctions issued by Judge BARNARD to serve on President RAMSEY and Treasurer PHELPS, of the Susquehanna Railroad. The complaint in the case of the Treasurer recited that he refused to transfer the stock of the towns of Oneonta and Worcester, being incited thereto by President RAMSEY. The complaint against President RAMSEY is based on the issue of certain stock about a year ago, and he is enjoined from further issue of stock, and also from acting as President of the road. In the absence of President RAMSEY Colonel NORTH locked the doors of the offices of the Company, but they were immediately reopened by Superintendent VAN VALKENBURG. A large crowd gathered about the office, as there were indications of an outbreak, but the Police being notified, quiet was restored. JACOB LEONARD, one of Colonel NORTH'S party, seized the scrip book, but brought it back after keeping it several hours. The stock of the town of Sidney, Delaware County, was transferred to JAY GOULD, and the crowd dispersed, though the end is not yet.

The Sheriff of the County is there with his deputies prepared to call out a force large enough to keep the strikers away from the furnaces. There are about 700 miners in the town.

WEST POINT.

The Last Examination—Official Report of the Board of Visitors—The Working of the Present System—Satisfaction with the Institution.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, Aug. 5.

The Board of Visitors appointed by the President to attend the annual examination at the United States Military Academy at West Point, in June last, have submitted their report to the War Department, and it will be laid before Congress at its next session.

The Board was composed of Judge CHARLES H. WARREN, of Massachusetts; General JOHN EATON, Jr., of Tennessee; General DAVID HUNTER, U. S. A.; General W. O. GRESHAM, of Indiana; Hon. B. F. LOAN, of Missouri; and Presidents ANDERSON, of the Rochester University, New-York, and STANTON, of the Miami University, Ohio.

By law it was made the duty of the Board to examine into the discipline, instruction, police, administration, fiscal affairs and other concerns of the Academy, and full reports upon each of those subjects are made.

The system of discipline prevalent at the Academy is very highly commended. The personal freedom so necessary to the development of strong, self-reliant characters is not imperiled by unwise restraint, yet the personal knowledge of the Superintendent respecting the habits, conduct and capacity of officers and cadets is surprisingly minute, and without being oppressive or tyrannical, and consequently repulsive, is made to exercise a constant and powerful influence over both. The main purpose of the Academy, to train young men to be safe and successful officers, is ever kept in view, and never subordinated to other ends. No oppression exists on the part of officers, or sense of degradation on the part of the cadets; but a strict and rigorous discipline, justly, but kindly enforced, commands even from its subjects cordial obedience. To every duty well performed a value is attached, while acts of neglect and disobedience are charged to the offender, to count against him in the future. The habitual use of the language, forms and routine of the military service imparts to the future officer, while still a cadet, much knowledge of a part of his future duties. The principles of nationality, love of country, and of high personal honor, are carefully nurtured, and insures to the country patriotic and honest as well as able officers. The list of offences exhibits a gratifying freedom from malicious disobedience or moral turpitude, carelessness being the principal offence known, now that the skillful and persistent efforts of the authorities have all but obliterated the former offences of occasional intoxication, and persecution of new cadets. The Board was pleased with the long-existing practice of reporting the conduct and class standing of each cadet monthly to his friends, but would have been glad to find more evidence that the labors of the academic authorities were seconded by influences from home, and that no cadet is allowed to fall below the measure of his abilities for want of such inspiration, made doubly necessary by his long separation from his family. The introduction and gradual extension of the system of enlarged privileges as a reward for good conduct is declared to be working very well.

Instruction at the Academy is carried on under general direction of the Superintendent and the special supervision of the Professors, assisted by army officers distinguished for their attainments in the special branches they are severally detailed to teach. The division of the classes into sections, each in charge of an assistant—the Professor, proceeding from section to section, imparting the benefit of his riper knowledge to both teachers and taught—produces a uniformity of attainment not otherwise possible, and is declared to be one of the best features in the system. The blackboard illustrations and recitations of the cadets command high praise, and attest their scientific comprehension of their subjects and the faithfulness and ability of their instructors. A marked deficiency in elegance and even facility of utterance was, however, found to exist, and more training in logic, composition and criticism is considered as exceedingly desirable. This and other deficiencies is charged to the low standard of qualifications for admission, which is asserted to be two years of study below the average of colleges and universities in our own country and in military schools abroad, and to the necessity of devoting the cadets' limited time at the Academy to the studies especially appertaining to his intended profession of arms. While praising the attainments of the cadets in foreign languages, the Board think that equal attention should be given to our own. The suggested remedial measures for existing deficiencies are embraced in written as well as oral examinations; short courses of lectures upon physical geography, as connected with military operations, and hygiene, as connected with the care and preservation of troops in the field, and historical studies as a means of education. The standard of admission should be raised to correspond in some degree with the standard of other educational institutions at home and abroad. Constant additions to the scientific apparatus are advised, and the collections of illustrations of natural history, zoology and mineralogy being found to be very far below what is required, a plan for their enlargement and improvement is recommended for adoption. Competitive examinations as the basis of appointment to the Academy are also suggested. The separation of the Chaplainey from the Professorship of Ethics, as an act of justice to both those important offices now languishing from their enforced union, is recommended by the Board, as it has been by all their predecessors for many years. The study of the course of ethics has long been distasteful to the cadets, and this important branch has fallen far below its standard; but it is believed that the reorganization proposed would revive and make it popular. The Board consider the proposition made to abolish it altogether as inadmissible, but its useful continuance is regarded as dependent upon reorganization. In drawing, it is advised that more time s be given to draw from nature by the eye, and less time to mechanical copying. In practical instruction of all kinds, and both of a military and civil character, gratifying proficiency was observed. An interesting chapter of the report is devoted especially to the signal and telegraph drill, the application of these auxiliaries to military operations, and the almost wonderful combinations of one with the other, as illustrated by the cadets, exciting the admiration of the Board. The police of the grounds and buildings, with the exception of a want of underground drainage, is pronounced, after general observation, confirmed by minute examination, to be excellent in every respect.

The Superintendent's administration of the varied concerns of the Academy, zealously aided by his staff officers, is as highly commended by this as by former Boards of Visitors.

In commenting upon this branch of their inquiry, the Board express an opinion adverse to the displacement unnecessarily of any officers in the more responsible administrative posts.

The fiscal affairs of the Academy are reported upon very favorably. Purchases of supplies seem to have been judiciously made at seasonable times, and consequently at reasonable prices, and the accounts have been kept with scrupulous exactness.

The Cadets' Hospital is large enough for the ordinary wants of the Academy: is well kept, but needs more light and a better system of drainage than cess-pools beneath the building.

The library contains some 23,000 volumes, chiefly scientific works pertaining to the studies pursued at the Academy, but with a judicious infusion of biographical and historical works. To enable it to keep up with the wants of the age, yearly appropriations are needed, and $3,000 is suggested as the appropriation for the current year. A good catalogue is much needed, and one has been prepared without any cost to the Government, and its publication, at a cost of $1,000, is advised.

In conclusion, the Board express their opinion that however nearly the Military Academy may have met the wants of the past, it does not, in view of our national growth, the place we have taken among the nations and the progress made of late years in the science and art of war, meet the requirements of the present, as the one military school of a great nation, and that it should be raised to a standard unsurpassed abroad. They therefore recommend that the Academy be greatly enlarged, the number of pupils greatly increased, and two separate coarses of study pursued. One in a general class for all the cadets, the other in a special class formed by selection of the best material from the other class, the general class to be limited to a thorough comprehension of the elementary principles of the art of war; but the special class to be limited only to the boundaries of knowledge upon that subject. Other changes are suggested as dependent upon the adoption of this proposed basis of reorganization, reaching, among other things, to a return of a portion of the graduates in each year to civil life, and to an entire change in the system of promotion in the army.

As the result of their investigations the Board find that, considering existing obstacles, wonderful results have been attained under the present organization; that many defects of that organization can and should be remedied; but that the time has come for a new organization altogether, on a greatly enlarged plan.

THE TENNESSEE ELECTION.

Senter Elected Governor by 60,000 Majority—Johnson Men Sent to the Legislature—The Returns.

The returns do not yet show the election of one Senter Republican to the Legislature. It is two-thirds Democrats. The vote is heavy. The feeling was bitter, but the Stokes men have been overwhelmed by the Senter registration, and many have not voted. The election ended with a riot here between white railroad men and blacks, in which bullets and stones flew fast. Several persons were seriously injured.

WASHINGTON.

Reports from Tennessee—No Loss to the Government by the Philadelphia Fire—Proposed Convention of Liquor Dealers.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Aug. 5.

The few politicians and Southerners in town at present anxiously sought news to-day from Tennessee. Private dispatches received about noon gave the State to SENTER, and until late at night there was no further discussion of the subject.

Prominent politicians from Massachusetts, who are here, say that General BUTLER takes a very great interest in the election of the members to the Massachusetts Legislature this Fall, and is quietly endeavoring to secure the success of as many of his own friends as possible, with a view of securing their votes for himself for Senator to succeed Mr. WILSON in 1871.

On inquiry at the Internal Revenue Department to-day, it was ascertained that the Government will sustain no loss whatever by the Philadelphia fire, the tax having been paid on all the whisky destroyed.

The liquor dealers propose to hold a National Convention in this city during the Fall or Winter. The local organization of this city is now in correspondence with similar associations in New-York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other cities on the subject.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has just received from the Surveyor-General's Office at Leavenworth, a beautiful specimen of the marble recently discovered by the Leavenworth Coal Company in shafting for coal on their tract at the southeast corner of the Fort Leavenworth Reservation. The bed from which this specimen was taken lies at a depth of 300 feet from the surface, and the stratum is over twelve feet in thickness. This marble is a dolomitic silicate of magnesia, a composition more durable than Italian marble. The specimen received is polished on one side, showing small crystals of pearl spar, while some of the markings have the appearance of light clouds.

The Alabama Election—Democratic Gain in Tuscaloosa.

Election in North Carolina—Victory of the Extreme Radicals.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Thursday, Aug. 5.

The election to fill the vacancy in the Legislature, which has excited so much interest the past few weeks, passed off without disturbance to-day. No definite or reliable returns are received, but it is generally conceded that EAGLES is elected by several hundred majority, in a poll of about 5,000 votes. Two Republican candidates were in the field. The Eagles faction was led by the Northern whites, and represent what is known here as the more extreme Republicans. LARKINS, moderate Republican, was supported by the conservative whites. The election was regarded so important that the county was canvassed by General J. C. ABBOTT, United States Senator, in behalf of the Eagles faction. The election was excited and unusual interest was manifested because this was the first evidence of a serious split in the Republican Party. The Conservatives had no candidate and polled about half their strength for LARKINS.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Aug. 5.

The attendance at the exposition of textile fabrics was greatly increased to-day. The premiums will be awarded to-morrow, after which the sale of goods will be commenced. A special meeting of the Northwestern Wool-Growers' and Manufacturers' Association was held this morning in the exposition rooms. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Frequent changes in legislation in regard to tariff and taxes create fluctuations and uncertainties which are injurious to business men; and

Whereas, The tariff on wool and woolens was agreed on by representatives of wool growers and manufacturers, and adjusted for mutual justice; therefore,

Resolved, We approve of the present wool tariff, and consider any agitation or radical change injurious and ill-timed.

Resolved, We are opposed to a renewal of what is known as the Canadian Reciprocity Treaty.

Resolved, As the interests of the wool growers and manufacturers of the United States are identical, it is right and highly proper they should cultivate more friendly relations, and to that end they should attend our expositions more frequently.

An adjourned meeting of the Presidents of the Republican associations of the various Assembly Districts was held last evening at the corner of Broadway and Twenty-second-street, to hear the report of a Committee appointed at a previous meeting to ascertain the number of offices in the Custom-house and Post Office that had been given to the several districts, with a view to making such representations to the Collector and Postmaster as would secure a fair apportionment to each district. The meeting was private, no reporters being admitted

Alarm of the Spaniards—Attack on Puerto Principe—Repulse of the Rebels—Defeat of Jordan and Mariano, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, July 31, 1869.

The news of the recent Carlist disturbances in Spain has been received here with unmistakable demonstrations of joy by the friends of Cuban independence who see in all political movements inaugurated in old Spain, having for their object the overthrow of the existing Spanish Government, an immense diversion created in favor of the revolution of Yara, and the most happy results are confidently predicted by the stanch partisans of "Young Cuba." Real alarm on the other hand has been created among the Spanish ultras, who tax with a lack of true patriotism all those engaged in presenting obstacles to the perfection and consolidation of SERRANO'S and PRIM'S Government. Even the Prensa, wedded for better or worse to the rotten and tyrannical political system of the past ages, sounds the key-note of alarm, and counsels unity as the only means by which it is possible to preserve intact the integrity of Spanish territory. It advises the putting forth at once of the complete strength of the Spanish arm in Cuba for the prompt suppression of the rebellion, which is making out of what was one of nature's most bountiful gardens, nothing but an arid waste. The pathetic Diario, with an increased effusion of patriotic tears and appeals to the virtue and "refined loyalty" of the Spanish element throughout the island generally, advises the rapid formation of more volunteer organizations everywhere, and the utilization of their services in the field, as the only means of successfully competing with the revolution which from the diminutive proportions of Cuatrogatos has grown to be quite a respectable young giant, who, besides his own lusty young strength, possesses as aids the climate and the terrible epidemics which prevail in it and rapidly decimate the raw legions of Spain. Those epidemics have proved largely fatal in the Eastern Department, and if the followers of CESPEDES and AGUILERA had only inflicted on the Spaniards a loss corresponding to that produced by them, the Cuban Republic would now have been an assured fact. The Cubans, as a general thing, however, seem to place a great deal more confidence in the goodness of Providence than in their own efforts, and look rather to the miraculous interpositions of His power in their behalf than to the virtue and efficacy of their own valor. So sanguine are some of them that the same special Providence has taken under its protecting wings the Government of CESPEDES and company, that they seem to regard the putting forth of any more of their own strength as the tendering of superfluous aids to that same Providence. The Spaniards, with probably as much faith in its goodness, are of the opinion that a few more efforts on their own part would not be unacceptable, and are therefore straining every nerve to accomplish the annihilation of the rebellion. New volunteer organizations are being formed throughout the island, and wherever possible small detachments, supported at the expense of planters, are being organized for the protection of the plantations from the rebel torches. Assured of the impunity afforded by the mountains, the rebel army is organizing itself rapidly into brigades, regiments and battalions and acquiring all the efficiency which it is possible to give to an army composed of men who have been slaves all their lives. Their largest camps of instruction are situated at the famous Sierra de Cabitas under QUESADA, and at Holguin under General JORDAN, and the latter is said to be producing the best possible results, due, doubtless, to the infusion of a good deal of the American spirit by the General, who presides over it as well as over the department of his command. The possession by the rebels of two forces, respectable in numbers and mobilized in form, is likely to produce results rather unfavorable to the Spaniards, and the best possible things are confidently looked for by the Cubans, as soon as those "armies"—if I may dignify them by the title—begin to move; in fact the presumptuousness of the wiseacres of this city knows no bounds, and quite recently we were sternly informed by them to be prepared to hear of the taking of Santiago de Cuba and Puerto Principe by simultaneous attacks. We waited very patiently for the interesting news, and excitement reached a considerable pitch and then began to die out almost, when all of a sudden we were startled by news of an

ASSAULT ON PUERTO PRINCIPE.

I am very sorry that I am unable to give you the rebel account of this grand military fiasco on the part of the "Libertadores," but am obliged, for lack of a more authentic one, to give you that furnished by Spanish sources. However, as it is not very grandiloquent in its nature, and is spiced with much less than the usual amount of bombast, it may, with very few reservations, be received as true.

On the morning of the 20th, at 4:30 o'clock, the inhabitants of Puerto Principe were aroused from their slumbers by rapid discharges of small arms in the outskirts of the city, and the alarm thus unexpectedly given soon put the whole garrison in movement, who, in detachments, hastened to the protection of the most threatened points. The Plaza de la Caridad was the principal point attacked by the rebels, who were opposed by a battalion of marines stationed there. To this point General PUELLO directed his attention, and reinforced the marines by the battalion of "La Union." The concentration of those forces at this point caused the rebels to retire slowly to Corojo, pursued by the Spaniards, who had now brought a piece of artillery into play. The rebels retiring were followed by the Spaniards, with General PUELLO at their head, beyond Guanamaguilla, where it was deemed prudent not to follow them further, and the Spaniards returned to the city without having lost a single man wounded, the rebels losing in this particular engagement eleven killed.

By the gate of Beneficiencia a party of 100 insurgents penetrated into the city, having first killed the sentinel, who was stationed there, unfortunately alone, and another party of forty men who took possession of the Quinta de Carneseltas, were routed by a squad of ten volunteers. A great many of the insurgents were negroes, and on entering and crying, "Viva Cuba libre," were seconded by several of the citizens. The volunteers having undertaken the persecution of this band of insurgents, the space between Beneficiencia gate and Tinima bridge was soon cleared of the enemy.

Another force under Colonel PEDRO AGUILAR, amounting to 350 men and two pieces of artillery, pursued the rebels who attacked the city at this point, fire having been opened by them from a neighboring store. Some twenty insurgents, who were in said store, retired on the Arroyo Mendes bridge, where they formed a junction with their main body, amounting to 400 men. Colonel AGUILAR, advancing on this point with his force, the rebels retired in a very disorganized condition, the Spaniards firing a parting salute of three shells, one of which falling among a group of insurgents, caused them to disappear as if by magic.

At 8:50 the troops returned to the city without having lost a single man. The insurgents lost two men, (in the Cucaracha store,) who were shot by a Lieutenant-Colonel of cavalry, LACUOTOT and a sergeant of lancers from the balcony of a house with two Peabody rifles; their bodies were taken off by their companions. Another small force of infantry under Captain MUSLERA, pursued a band of insurgents, who presented themselves on the line of railroad, and drove them to Pineda, dispersing them completely with a loss of two killed. The account of this last exploit adds that this party was under command of BETANCOURT, who was killed in the streets of the city while leading his dusky legions.

So ends the famous rebel attack on Puerto Principe. If they are not more fortunate in their efforts on Santiago de Cuba their military reputation will not increase much more than it has done heretofore.

ANOTHER REBEL FAUX PAS.

The forces of JORDAN, MARMOL MARCANO and FIGUEREDO attacked simultaneously the Spanish detachments on the estates La Cruz, Santa and Sitio, San Jose and Santa Isabel, as also those of the Palma Soriano village, and were repulsed at all those points. The Captain of the force stationed at La Cruz left to reinforce Santa Ana, but on hearing the firing on the former estate returned in time to defeat the rebels, causing them a loss of three killed. At the Santa Ana they were also defeated with a loss of thirteen killed. The Santa Isabel, possessing a force of only thirty-two men, was attacked by 400 insurgents, who were repulsed with a loss of twenty-two killed and several wounded. San Jose and Palmo Soriano and Soriano also repulsed the rebels with a loss of eight killed.

Several other minor engagements have taken place throughout the island, and the usual amount of incendiarisms and unimportant scrimmages, with which I will not tire your patience.

NEWBURG.

Preparations for the Reception of President Grant—He is to Arrive There To-morrow.

From Our Special Correspondent.

NEWBURG, Thursday, Aug. 5, 1869.

Everybody in Orange County is excited over the intended visit of President GRANT to this city on Saturday. Especially are the Newburg people "worked up" over the matter. Already the arrangements have received official form and sanction. The preliminaries were arranged at West Point in June last, when Mayor CLARK, of Newburg, and Hon. JOEL T. HEADLEY "interviewed" the President in relation to the construction of a carriage road along the shore of the river from West Point to Cornwall. At that interview the President heartily indorsed the idea, and promised Mayor CLARK to visit this city in July last, but his Long Branch excursion interfered.

On Friday last Mayor CLARK had another interview with the President in Washington, and General GRANT promised to visit Newburg on Saturday, Aug. 7. As soon as the Common Council heard of the intended visit resolutions were adopted inviting him here as the guest of the city. The following Committee of Arrangements was then appointed: Mayor Clark, General William R. Brown, Hon. Joel T. Headley, Judge James W. Taylor, Alderman Alex. McCann, J. J. S. McCroskey and Alfred Post, Esq. A special committee has already chartered the special steamer M. Martin, General GRANT'S old dispatch-boat, for special service in bringing the President from Garrison's or West Point. The boat will leave

GERMAN TRAVEL.

From Munich to Nuremberg—St. Sebald's Church—City Scenes—The Church of St. Laurence—The Torture Chamber—An Aristocratic Cemetery—The Post.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NUREMBERG, Saturday, June 5, 1869.

From Munich we took the railroad by way of Augsberg to Nuremberg, crossing the Danube by a bridge a little below the old road bridge, and the whole journey was interesting. Augsburg itself is a very attractive city. One of the chief free cities of the Empire in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, its commerce was widely extended and its prosperity very great. The beautiful PHILIPPINA WELSER, of whom we had seen so many memorials at Innsbruck, was born here, and the house in which she lived still remains The religious wars of the seventeenth century, and the discovery of the passage round the Cape, drove into other channels the commerce which at one time was almost monopolised by Augsberg; and its chief business now is banking and stock-jobbing, being considered, after Frankfort, one of the great money markets of the continent. Much of the old walls and ditches which surround the town still remain, and furnish pleasant and pretty promenades. The old Bishop's Palace, at present partly a royal residence and partly Government officers, was the spot where the famous Confession of Augsberg—as the declaration of faith by the Protestants was called—was presented to CHARLES V. in 1536. The room in which and the hour of the day—3 o'clock in the afternoon of the 25th of June—at which this notable scene occurred, are carefully remembered; otherwise, the building is of little interest. The Emperor, unwilling that the confession should be made in public, commanded the Saxon Chancellor to read it in Latin, which that sturdy Protestant declined, replying that on German ground it was not meet for an apology of faith, which should be made as public as possible, to be read in a language not understood by Germans,—and he carried his point. Here, too, in 1542, occurred the famous conference between LUTHER and the Cardinal of Gaeta, on the reformed religion, which, in the preceding twelve years, had made such rapid and extensive progress; and thirteen years after, from this spot the decree was promulgated which first granted toleration to the Lutherans of Germany.

It was nearly midnight when we found ourselves at the handsome railway station at Nuremberg, and as we were driven to our hotel through its narrow, irregular streets, the moonlight gave a fanciful and weird effect to the quaint gable-faced houses with which they were lined. Fortunate in our weather, we were off betimes the next morning for a tour through this extraordinary and picturesque old city—at different times the grandest and most powerful of the free Imperial cities, the residence of Emperors, the seat of Diets, the house of German freedom and art, celebrated for its manufactures, which were so prized in all parts of the world as to give rise to the saying,

"Nuremberg's hand goes thro' every land."

It is still a place of much prosperity, with a population of about 65,000, of which the Romanists, for many years not allowed to hold property in the town, number not over 5,000, and the Jews, who at one time were prohibited, under pain of death, from sleeping within the walls, about as many more.

Our first visit was to St. Sebald's Church, part of which dates from the tenth and the rest from the thirteenth century. Both outside and inside it is a grand, imposing building, with two towers of 260 feet in height, and portals carved in the richest style of art, those on the "Bride's Door" in high relief being by the famous ADAM KRAFFT, whose name, with those of ALBERT DURER and PETER VISCHER, occupy the highest place among the artists of the city. Of the interior, the choir is the most striking portion. It is supported on clustered columns, and lighted by lofty and narrow windows, fifty feet high, with forty feet mullions, which are admirable specimens of masonry. There are some fine stained-glass windows of the sixteenth century, and some creditable sculptures; and in one of the chapels we saw a very much ornamented bronze font, with statues of the four Evangelists at its base, which is said to be the oldest existing Nuremberg casting. The most remarkable object in the church, however, is the shrine or tomb of St. Sebaldus, which still remains in the centre of the choir, notwithstanding the devotion of the building to the Lutheran services. It is a beautiful work of art, the masterpiece of another of those three old worthies of whom Nuremberg is so justly proud, PETER VISCHER, who, with his three sons, was occupied twelve years in its construction. A bronze Gothic canopy, with rich fretwork, supported by light and graceful pillars, covers the relics of the saint, which are inclosed in an oaken chest, encased with silver plates. Upon brackets at the sides of the pillars are excellent statues of the twelve apostles, full of expression; while above are twelve smaller figures of Fathers of the Church, with cupids and various animals scattered among the flowers and foliage with which the whole shrine is adorned. Below are some well-executed bass-reliefs, representing the miracles of the Saint, and in a niche at the end facing the altar is a statue of the artist in his mason's dress, with apron and chisel, while at the opposite end is an equally good figure of Saint Sebald. It is not easy to give an adequate idea of the beauty and admirable execution of this great work of art, "completed"—as the inscription on the monument, which was written by the artist himself, records—"for the praise of God Almighty alone, and the honor of Saint Sebald, Prince of Heaven, by the aid of pious persons, paid by their voluntary contributions," which latter clause is supposed to refer to the wretched pittance with which VISCHER was rewarded for so much labor and skill.

Passing by the parsonage house, with its beautiful oriel window, and the old Gothic chapel of St. Maurice, now a picture gallery, we came to an open space, called Albert Dürer's Platz, with an excellent bronze statue of DURER, erected by subscription, to which that liberal patron of art, the Ex-King LEWIS, was a large contributor. ALBERT DURER'S quaint old house still remains, and is carefully protected from injury by its present occupants; but of the work of this great artist, his native city, upon which he conferred such fame, is almost bare. Proofs of his skill as an engineer exist in the walls and angular bastions on the north side of the city, which were constructed after his plans upon his return from Italy, where he learned the science of modern fortification. The whole city is surrounded by feudal walls and turrets, with ramparts and bastions, inclosed by a ditch 100 feet wide and fifty feet deep, the sides of which are faced throughout with masonry. Its four chief arched gates are flanked by heavy cylindrical towers, which, with the numerous other ancient towers encircling the city, give it an exceedingly picturesque and striking appearance. As fortifications they would hardly amount to much in this era of warlike improvements, and the great ditch has been put to a pleasanter use, being converted into flower and vegetable gardens, which rejoice the eye on every side. A small river, the Pegnitz, divides the city into two nearly equal parts, St. Sebald's side and St. Laurence's side, so called after the two great churches; and, after having seen the former, we drove through the curious old streets, with their narrow-fronted, highly-ornamented, acutely-pointed gabled houses, to have a look at the church of St. Laurence. This is the largest and finest in the city, a noble Gothic pile of the twelfth century, the towers terminating in a graceful spire with wide openings divided by many mullions in the square portion to represent the gridiron upon which the Saint was broiled. Of the doors, the Bride's Door on the north, with its beautiful carvings, and the one at the west end, are the finest—the latter, twenty-four feet wide and forty feet high, being very richly ornamented with statues, bass reliefs, and with life-size figures of Adam and Eve on either side. Above is the great robe window, over thirty feet in diameter, with its gorgeous painted glass, of which very beautiful specimens are also to be seen in the choir of the church, presented by patrician families, and emblazoned with their coats of arms. For brilliancy of color and excellence of design, they are equal to almost anything in Europe—for, among its other arts, Nuremberg was long celebrated for glass painting. There is one curious window in which the four Evangelists are represented with the heads of their symbolic animals—St. John with an eagle's head, St. Luke with a bull's head, &c. The Sacrament-shaalslein, in which the consecrated wafer was kept, is an open-work, tapering stone spire, sixty feet high, wonderfully well carved, with the slender top bending gracefully over, and, like those at Ulm, Ratesbon, Nordhirgen, &c., is peculiar to this part of Germany, though this one at Nuremberg is the finest of them all.

It is difficult to conceive of anything more beautiful and graceful than this Gothic stone "tabernacle." Above the ciborium the principal events of the Passion are represented in relief, after the manner of ALBERT DURER, and the whole is supported by three kneeling figures of ADAM KRAFFT and his two apprentices, who gave five years continuous and conscientious labor to the completion of this striking work of real art. Suspended from the high roof of the church, just before the altar, is a curious round wood carving, representing the Salutation of the Virgin by the Angel, with a chaplet of roses surrounding them, in which are depicted in relief the Seven Joys of the Virgin, while God the Father is above, and beneath hangs the Serpent.

The Frauenkirche, the only Roman Catholic Church, has a richly decorated carved portal, with statues of the Virgin, Apostles, Saints, &c.; and the vestibule rejoices in similar figures. The interior, though containing many monuments from other churches which have been pulled down, presents little of interest. Close by, in the same open space, is der schöne Brunnen, "the Beautiful Fountain," a graceful Gothic spire, fifty-six feet high, of open-work stone, with sixteen stone figures placed in pairs against the eight pillars, representing the seven Electors and the nine "stout heroes," Christian, Jewish and Pagan. There are JULIUS CÆSAR, ALEXANDER and HECTOR—JUDAS MACCABÆUS, JOSHUA and DAVID—CHARLEMAGNE, GODFREY of Bouillon and CLOVIS—and above these again are eight other statues of Moses and the Prophets. Another noticeable fountain is the Goose fountain, close by the goose market—the Gänsemännchen, a bronze peasant, carrying under each arm a goose spouting water from its mouth—very cleverly executed—and not far off, we drove past the house of the cobbler poet, HANS SACHS, and of PALUR, the bookseller, with its blood-red inscription, commemorating the fact that he was shot by the BONAPARTE for publishing an abusive pamphlet against him.

Driving out under one of the great arched gateways we made a circuit of the walls, obtaining a thorough view of the old ramparts and of the many picturesque-looking towers with which they are crowned, at intervals of every few hundred yards; and then reëntering the city over one of the bridges spanning the wide and deep moat, brilliant with roses and other flowers, we came to the Froschthurm, the tower in which the old implements of torture are still preserved. Through a narrow passage cut out of the solid rock, a number of steps led down to a succession of rooms in which prisoners were examined, and subjected to various modes of punishment. Through apertures in the roof the authorities heard the confessions extorted from their victims, the appliances for insuring these confessions exhibiting every form of devilish ingenuity. Thumb-screws, iron boots, an iron chair, the seat studded with spikes upon which the accused was forced to sit, while heavy weights were attached to the legs and feet to keep the sitter well down, an iron cradle filled with spikes, the Spanish ass, a sharp-backed wooden quadruped, which the rider bestrode with masses of iron attached to his feet, iron collars to fit the neck, tightened by screws, ropes and pulleys working upon inclined plank—up and down which prisoners were drawn and stretched to their utmost tension, with many other like devices, and finally a veritable rack in good order with its spiked roller and with all the infernal machinery which made this so fearful a mode of torture. Passing through these rooms, each more horrid than the other, we came at length—after threading various narrow passages, through eight heavy wooden doors—to a circular chamber, from which no sounds could reach beyond its walls of stone, and where no light but that of torches could penetrate, containing the Iron Virgin, and in one corner the chair upon which those condemned to this mode of death were beheaded. This was merciful punishment in comparison with the lingering agonies endured by those who were forced to submit to the embraces of the terrible Jungfrau!

In the centre of the room stood an iron figure, seven feet high, which opened to receive its victim, and then closed over him—iron spikes being so arranged in the inside as to pierce the eyes, the breast, the thighs, and the lower legs! Underneath was a trap door, through which, when life was extinct, the dead body was dropped into a canal eighteen feet below, which communicated with the river flowing through the town, and in reply to any question when this horrible instrument of torture was last used, the reply was: "That is a State secret. No one knows who was the last sufferer." In front of the only aperture which led to the hole of hell, was a bench upon which prisoners were forced to remain for half an hour previous to their execution—to reflect upon the tortures that awaited them, and, if so disposed, to make a final confession of their real or supposed crimes. The contrast, as we came out again into the open air and the bright sunshine, brought with it a sensation almost overwhelming; and we left the place with a shudder at the thought of the atrocities perpetrated there—that, too, not in a feudal dungeon, but in a great, prosperous, free city—and with a feeling of profound rejoicing that the days when such diabolical horrors were perpetrated have happily passed away forever.

The Imperial castle, part of which is looked upon as the oldest building in the city, stands upon an elevated position, from which the view of Nuremburg and of the surrounding country is very fine. It has been a favorite residence of many of the German Emperors, dating back from the tenth century, part built by CONRAD I., and part by BARBAROSSA, with three massive towers, one of which is called the Heathen Tower, because of its carved decorations, which were once supposed to represent idols. There is a curious double chapel, the upper portion resting upon slender marble pillars, for the Lord of the manor and his family, while his retainers said their prayers in the chapel below, which is adorned with some grotesque reliefs in marble and in wood. In the castle yard we were shown a famous lime-tree, of which the age is reported to be over seven hundred years, with a straight trunk of thirty feet in height and fifteen feet in circumference—a marvel of vegetation, in very truth.

Outside of the city, and perhaps half a mile distant, is the remarkable churchyard of St. John, the burial place for centuries of the aristocratic families of Nuremberg. The graves are all numbered, and mostly decorated with coats of arms, that of ALBERT DURER, whose beautiful life was brought to an end by the piteous complaint of a scolding wife, having been despoiled of his precious remains to make place for more ignoble dust. The road from the Thiergärtner gate to the churchyard is marked only by seven stone stations, in imitation of the via sacra from Pilate's house to Calvary, with bas-reliefs by ADAM KRAFFT of scenes of the Passion, which were placed by one of the Nuremberg burghers, at intervals, between his own house and the church-yard gate, corresponding with the distance between the real stations in Jerusalem. In every direction around the walls are the beer gardens, which play so important a part in German life, and to one of these—the Rosenau—we drove to drink coffee and beer, hear music and look at the people. An ill-timed shower cut short this out-door amusement, and we went back to our good hotel, the Baienscherhof, admiring all the way the queer old city, which retains, more than any other in Europe, perhaps, the aspect of ages long gone by, with its five and six story houses, their narrow fronts richly sculptured with fanciful and elaborately carved bow windows, high gables, pointed towers, surmounted by gilt weathercocks, and their peaked roofs, in some of which I counted as many as five tiers of dormer windows! It is a most picturesque and interesting place, full of grand historical memories—for its enterprising and enlightened citizens early adopted the Reformed faith, in support of which they freely contributed of their wealth and lives. From the effects of the calamitous thirty years' war Nuremberg never recovered; and eagerly espousing the cause of the noble Swedish hero, GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, who took refuge within its walls from the vastly superior force of his great rival, WALLENSTEIN, the sacrifices made to prevent the retreat of the King's forces as well as the capture of the city, entailed upon it a burden which weighed heavily upon its fortunes for more than a hundred years.

Its burgher nobility boasts of very ancient descent, the ancestors of the present royal family of Prussia first figuring in history as BURGRAVE of Nuremburg; and until after the peace of Presburg in 1805 the city retained the Constitution with its privileges and immunities which had been bestowed upon it by successive German Emperors from as far back as the beginning of the twelfth century. It was in 1806 that Nuremburg ceased to be a free city, and was given over by NAPOLEON to the King of Bavaria, in whose prosperous and attractive domain there is no more precious jewel than this grand old city.

MONTANA.

Summer Solstice—The Season's Yield of Gold—Improvements in Helena—Deer Lodge—The Future of Montana.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HELENA, Montana, Monday, July 26, 1869.

Doubtless your readers away down on the Atlantic seaboard would imagine the vicinity of the snow-capped Rocky Mountains to be a good place to go in quest of coolness in the dog days, whereas there is nothing cool about it except the proposition. I am sorry to puncture the illusion, by informing you that while I write, the thermometer is ranging from 100 to 110 degrees. There is no disguising the fact that it is hot. But we have the consolation of a balmy pure air and sempeternal cool and invigorating nights. The fact is that in this latitude one does not realize the extremes of either heat or cold, as in the damp enervating atmosphere of the South. I have suffered more from both in New-Orleans and New-York, than here among the mountains with the thermometer fifteen degrees higher or lower. We are suffering more from the unusual drought this season, than the heat, as it seriously interferes with gulch mining, and in some districts where means of irrigation have been neglected, the fields and gardens begin to look parched, in compensation whereof the grass hoppers have totally disappeared, and the stopping of work in the placer diggings has imparted early and unusual vigor to the quartz mining.

The yield of gold the coming season will astonish the old gold States. The most extensive preparations are making throughout the Territory to push mining of all kinds with the greatest energy. Several splendid quartz lodes in this vicinity, which have been in process of development for the past year or two, are eliciting Eastern capital, and a number of strong companies are preparing for vigorous work early in the Fall. The Whitlatch Park Lode is of this class, and bids fair, in the estimation of experienced miners, to surpass in quality and quantity of gold ore any previous enterprise of that energetic and successful pioneer quartz miner. It consists of some 1,600 feet of claims on the west of the famous Whitlatch Union Mines, whence a million and a half has been extracted. Mr. WHITLATCH has expended over $50,000 in developing this lode and preparing it for immediate and profitable working, and is now East to procure machinery. It is believed by mining experts hereabouts to be the largest and richest deposit yet discovered in the country. Mr. NOLAND, of the Atlantic Cable mine, is also East for the same purpose, and all the companies in this vicinity are busy refitting and getting in order for a big Winter's work. Labor is now abundant at reasonable prices. The usual Spring and Summer scatterment of laboring miners into the more profitable placers, the demand for labor in rebuilding the town, and the stampede to White Pine nearly closed quartz operations for a time; but the reaction has come early, and matters are looking up most decidedly. The daily receipts of bullion and dust at the Helena Bank are over $50,000 per day. A seven-pound nugget was taken out of "Bilk Gulch" a few days ago, by G. W. MOORE. The lucky miner had better rechristen that gulch. A nice little silver "button," weighing $2,800, was sent in from the Stapleton Silver Mines a few days ago, and last week the banking-house of BOHM & AUB shipped the "heftiest" gold brick yet made in Montana, although by no means the last. The value of this little auriferous pocket-piece was $40,000.

ROBBERY OF WELLS & FARGO.

I cannot learn the amount of gold shipped per Wells & Fargo's Express. Those gentlemen are somewhat reticent in imparting such information, as some dexterous individual of the light-fingered persuasion relieved one of their coaches of $7,200 a short time ago. It was no fault of their employes, or no banditti performance, but simply a piece of sharp practice, similar to that you are accustomed to in New-York. But, unlike your New-York detectives, Mr. S. M. POLLINGER, the energetic and shrewd division agent of Messrs. WELLS & FARGO, recaptured the money within two days thereafter.

IMPROVEMENTS IN HELENA.

If it was wonderful that a city of eight thousand inhabitants like Helena could spring up in the Rocky Mountains in four or five years, it is still more miraculous to see her rising in as many months, Phenix-like, from the ashes of the great conflagration last Spring. Where once stood the patched shanty of the miner, and the log cabin or rickety frame, immense piles of granite stores and warehouses now tower in massive city dignity. Main-street has been rebuilt in metropolitan style, and the whilom misfortune converted into a public blessing. HERSHFIELD & Co. have a fine ornate stone banking-house. Dr. FRANK has erected a beautiful little temple for Oriental baths. Only think of it, Oriental baths away out in the Occident, at the foot of Bald Mountain. The Odd Fellows have a fine stone building with handsome brick front. Messrs. STICKNEY & SON have erected a massive stone structure for their book store and the Montana Herald office. KENNA has a decidedly handsome fire-proof stone building opposite the Post Office. But the biggest thing for a new country is the stone edifice of Messrs. MATHER & CROCKER, 30 by 200 feet, to be used as a billiard saloon. TRAVIS is building a mammoth livery stable; and, by the way, the fine turn-outs, fast horses and handsomely-dressed ladies on the drive would not discredit Central Park. Mr. JULES GERMAIN, of the International, is building a new hotel to cost $50,000, of metropolitan size and finish, and PARKINSON is in for a new handsome theatre, with all the modern improvements. In brief, Helena begins to look quite city-like and architecturally handsome.

THE CAPITOL.

The subject of locating the capitol permanently is again agitating the politicians, and the little aspiring settlement of Deer Lodge has put in a bid, but Helena will doubtless be able to hold her own against all competitors. Deer Lodge claims to be a few miles nearer the geographical centre of the territory. The conservative old villages and even cities of the East, would be astonished at the drive and snap of this beautiful mountain city, as none but the energetic and adventurous dare to face the dangers of such a pilgrimage. The society is replete with live people. Churches, the omnipresent and omnipotent school-houses, stores and milliners have increased faster than the faro banks and whisky mills; and to-day a more refined and intelligent society, of wide-awake, liberal people can scarcely be found on the continent. The primitive, rude manners of the rough miner have gradually given way before the benign influence of woman, and the amenities of civilization, and even the refined affectations of fashion, are asserting away out here on the mountains, where only a few years ago the Blackfeet and Mountain Brows reigned supreme. It is not more than justice to an estimable gentleman to attribute much of the social improvement everywhere visible to the efforts of Rev. Bishop TUTTLE, of Montana, who has been quite indefatigable in his labors to modify and direct the rude energies of a new country to the ameliorating influences of a religious and civilized life.

THE FUTURE OF THE TERRITORY.

In regard to the future of this magnificent Territory, it is difficult to be brief. Montana has already contributed nearly an hundred millions to the solid wealth of the country, and the yield of precious metals is steadily on the increase. It is not too much to predict that should any of the proposed processes for desulphurizing ores prove successful, the yield of gold and silver will be doubled with the same labor; and in this connection it is reported here that a company in Colorado are erecting some furnaces to test the process of a Dr. HAGAN, of Troy, N. Y., and the most sanguine hopes are entertained of its success; if so it will prove the greatest boon for miners yet discovered. Agriculture in Montana is also surely and rapidly improving, apropos of which the first steam mower and reaper came in this season. The chief impediment the farmer has to encounter is the occasional lack of rain, this season unusually annoying, but the melting of the perpetual snows on the mountains renders irrigation cheap and easy, and no soil can be more fertile than these rich valleys. Every cereal fruit and vegetable known in New-York are raised here, and the markets are annually growing cheaper and more abundant in edibles; while the picturesque scenery and pure air are unsurpassed on the continent. Business is growing upon a secure and permanent basis, and the foundations are laid for a sterling, wholesome, vigorous prosperity, unequaled in any new country I have seen. The completion of the Union Pacific Railroad renders access comparatively easy, and the necessary staging in the comfortable, splendid coaches of WELLS & FARGO, from Bear River, is felt to be rather a rest and recreation after the long railroad ride. But the great future of Montana is based upon the Northern Pacific Railroad, which is here regarded as a foregone conclusion. When that is completed, Helena will be queen of the mountains and the very pet of the Pacific. The Union Telegraph line from Fort Benton was completed to this point on the 10th, and the last train of 70 tons freight of the Northwestern Transportation Company from Benton came in on the 9th. This Company have brought in this season some 1,500 tons of freight, and for two years have conducted business satisfactorily, with but few delays and no losses.

PROSPECT PARK.

Some Historical Notes as to its Origin—Its Location—The Grand Plaza—The Lincoln Monument—Prospect Hill Look-Out—The Drives, Walks, Arches, Playground, Means of Approach, Police, &c.

The visitor to Prospect Park, if he enters by the Flatbush-avenue approach or plaza, cannot fail to regard that great pleasure ground as a work of magnificence both in its natural and artificial design. The plaza is laid out in such graceful lines, and with such an air of grandeur, that one feels as if he is about to enter upon, as he really is, the home of nature. The style of the entrance is a noble tribute to the splendor of the hills, the vales, the groves and the lakes which, in their wonderful combinations and variations, constitute the interior worth of the gorgeous panorama, as it is seen from the summit of Prospect Hill. The natural advantages of Prospect Park are in themselves excellent, and challenge comparison with anything of the kind in the world, and the changes which the landscape artist has introduced, and is continuing to introduce, serve to bring out in bolder relief many points of value in the natural picture so as to be more generally and better comprehended and appreciated. All this is something for the people of this metropolis of Brooklyn and New-York to be proud of, the more especially as there was at one time imminent danger of the people not having any such a park. This peril is referred to by the Park Commissioners in their last annual report. They say: "In the year 1858 a project was bruited about for establishing a series of public pleasure-grounds in and about the city, each of which was intended to be located and laid out with reference to the accommodation, not of the population at large, but for the special benefit of that portion of the population which should live nearer to it than to either of the others. To advance this project a Commission was formed by an act of the Legislature of 1859, which in the following year reported a plan whereby the city would have had to maintain eight considerable public grounds. Three of these were to be of large size, and were intended for the benefit respectively of the eastern, central and southern districts of the city; while five others, more nearly of the class of Fort Greene, were designed more especially for local resort. Of the larger grounds, one was to be connected with each of the great city reservoirs, and the third was to be at Bay Ridge. This plan was found to be unwieldy and impracticable, and was abandoned. Nothing more was done toward supplying the city with pleasure-grounds until after a period of eight years from the origin of the first project. Instead of a scheme for establishing several public grounds, the pressing demand now was for one strikingly fine park, adapted to be resorted to from all quarters, which would retrieve the prestige that had been lost to the City by the construction of Central Park."

But to return to the plaza. During the last year it has been graded and paved; considerable progress has been made in the construction of the great fountain basin which is to form the centre of the ornament of the plaza, and the pedestal for the Lincoln monument has been put in its place. This last is a fine piece of masonry, and being of polished granite, will contribute largely to the beauty of the other features of the plaza.

Near the plaza, on the east side of Flatbush-avenue, is the reservoir occupying what is known as Prospect Hill. On the edge of the reservoir is a house, from the roof of which the observer commands one of the best, if not the very best, spectacles to be found on the American continent. Here is a spot where artists would be transported into raptures,—where an hundred artists might take separate sketches, and each produce a distinct work of landscape, and still be able to lay the stand-point under contribution for an additional scene. As the spectator takes his stand on the roof of this look-out he finds at his feet the Park, the Bay, New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Staten Island, New-Jersey, Long Island, &c., and this is the initiation of the visitor to Prospect Park. No wonder the Commissioners feel constrained to expend large sums of money to adorn and develop the interior of the park, for what is the visitor to see that is worth looking at after the magnificence and the gorgeous splendor of the beauteous expanse laid before him at the gateway! Only for this one ventures to endure the scorching rays of the sun, so necessary to aid the scene, for awhile, knowing that in the Park there are numerous shades, abundance of woods, besides arches beneath which the way-worn traveler may sit and wonder why earth should be unhappy while so much of beauty and cool shade has been furnished as oases for the benefit of mankind—and New-Yorkers and Brooklynites in particular.

The drives are sweeping and smooth; the footpaths are ample—all laid with concrete pavement, which appears to answer the purpose much better than the Scrimshaw in Montague-street or Bedford-avenue. At the plaza the visitor will find hacks which will convey him through and around such portions of the Park as are completed. These hacks drive at a rate regulated by the Commissioners, and four persons can enjoy the luxury of the drive for the reasonable fee of $1, or twenty-five cents each. At present the drive occupies about half an hour, and is one of the pleasantest to be had in any part of the country.

The footpaths are very discreetly laid out, the pedestrian being at intervals led into refreshing woods and through lawns of neatly-shaven grass. Beneath the arches are seats where weariness may be lounged off, and the visitor obtain both rest and fresh air to revive him for further travel. The Endale arch is a thing of beauty. The masonry is of Nova Scotia stone; the style is of the Grecian order; the lining is exceedingly well finished, consisting of black walnut and yellow pine alternately laid. The Nethermead arches are also excellent retreats, or rather, being a series of arches, is an excellent retreat.

The Rustic Trellis is also a pleasant retreat. But the great charm of the Park is the grand resort in the west woods—the Playground. Hither resort at least a hundred picnic parties from Sunday schools and churches in various parts of the city. Here are swings and shade, hills and dells, water and ice, all the appurtenances necessary to insure the picnickers of all the comfort necessary to make up the cup of a day's joy. Thousands of Brooklyn children know the way to the West Woods, and remember their experiences there with delight.

The whole area of the Park finished during the past year was one hundred and forty acres, exclusive of roads, walks and waters, of which one hundred and nine acres are slopes and meadows, and thirty-one woodland. The finished drives now amount to nearly three miles and a quarter. In the same time nearly a mile and a half of bridle-paths were finished and three miles and three-quarters of walks were finished, while five additional miles are now in progress. Two new arches are in progress also. Twelve acres of the lake were completed. The dimensions of the lake may now be set down at twenty acres. This beautiful expanse of water, when finished, will add greatly to the beauty of the scenery of the Park.

Altogether the Park is the feature of Brooklyn and will be worth all the money it costs when completed. That it will be, or is, superior to Central Park, is the fault of nature and the good sense of a public-spirited and far-seeing Commission. Of course much criticism is visited upon the Commissioners, and undoubtedly they may have overstepped the boundaries of economy in some cases, but upon the whole they appear to have comprehended most thoroughly the fact that they were engaged in establishing a great park for a great city—one which should, in all respects, be worthy of the home of metropolitan citizenship. Hence they may well say, as they have, that they congratulate their fellow-citizens upon the fact that they at length have a park worthy of the name, and in some degree commensurate with the magnitude and the requirements of a great city, where their eyes may be refreshed by resting upon something else than mere interminable rows of brick and mortar, and where refining meditative influences will ever teach us that trade is not the whole end and aim of life. That they have a park richly garnished with natural beauty, whose quiet repose, luxuriant foliage and fragrant ocean breeze may tempt them from those engrossing mercenary pursuits by which men are too apt to be absorbed, and lead them to better things. A broad precinct, free of access, permanent in duration, guarded well from rude intrusion—where genius may bring its offerings and nature and art blend together to work out images of serene and placid beauty; open equally to rich and to poor, and contributing alike to the pleasure and improvement of the sick and the well, the man of business and the man of work.

But, says the reader, "How shall we reach this paradise, this Prospect Park?" Brooklynites have many starting points. It is expected that the Franklin-avenue line of cars will soon be able to convey passengers from Williamsburg to the Grand Plaza on Flatbush-avenue. At present the Greenpoint cars, passing through Williamsburg, intercept the Flatbush-avenue cars at the junction of Myrtle-avenue and Fulton-street, and the Prospect Park and Coney Island cars at Jay-street and Myrtle-avenue, while the Hunter's Point line intercepts the Flatbush-avenue line at Willoughby-street and Fulton-avenue, and the Coney Island line at Jay and Willoughby streets. Then, there is the starting place of the Flatbush-avenue and Prospect Park cars at Fulton Ferry, and the Prospect Park and Coney Island cars from the eastern corner of Fulton-street, near the ferry. Other approaches are available from Atlantic or South Ferry, by Atlantic-avenue. The Prospect Park and Coney Island cars carry passengers close to the Playground in the West Woods, and is a pleasant ride.

One other feature about the Park must be named, and that is the manner in which its Police regulations are carried out. The officers are not mere ornamental but useless mummies. They are kind, genial, courteous and considerate gentlemen. They never assail a boy or a man, a girl or a woman visiting the Park whom they may find, either through ignorance or willfulness, violating its rules, with harsh language. They begin their business by imparting the information that law is being violated, and follow it up by giving such directions as will enable the visitor to do right. This is done in such a way as to disarm even the most mischievously inclined visitor. To the Police of the Park much is due for the assurance of comfort of which one feels sensible in his endeavors to enjoy a visit to Prospect Park.

THE NEW POST OFFICE

The Proposed Change of Location to the West Side of City Hall Park.

Mr. MULLETT, the architect of the new Post Office, and Mr. CALVIN T. HULBURD, who has recently been appointed to superintend the work of erecting the building, arrived in town on Wednesday evening and yesterday in company with Postmaster JONES, called on the Mayor in relation to changing the site of the new Post Office from the southern end to the west side of the Park, between Park-place and Murray-street. The Mayor favors the proposed change, it is understood, but the matter rests entirely with the Common Council, in which body the fee simple of the property is vested, and the Common Council is averse to making any change.

Commissioners were designated by the Government some time ago to confer with the Common Council relative to the proposed change of location of the Post Office, and a Committee was appointed by the Board of Aldermen to meet the Commissioners, but, up to the present time, no conference has taken place. The Chairman of the Aldermanic Committee has called a meeting of his colleagues for 1 o'clock on Monday next, when the Government Commissioners will be invited to be present, and it is possible that some determination may be arrived at.

Mr. MULLETT states that the contracts for the commencement of the work of erecting the building have all been signed, and that he is quite ready to begin, and that if the question of changing the site of the building is not settled within a very brief period, he will break ground on the present site, and carry on the work of erection as speedily as possible. It will be remembered that the present site extends from the southern angle of the park to a line drawn from the northern side of Beekman-street to the southern side of Park-place, and comprises about twenty-one city lots. The price paid by the Government for this land was $500,000. The Government is to have the railings bounding the site, but the fountain will be removed by the City authorities to Madison-square.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Income Tax.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read what your correspondents have written about the income tax, and, after thinking the matter over, I want to make a practical suggestion to relieve all difficulty. Nobody denies that such a tax is a convenient way to raise $40,000,000 a year, nor that there is a consolation to those who pay it in thinking that most of it is paid by honest men, the rogues generally escaping from contributing to it by superior skill. The authority to lay the tax is to be found in the Constitution. If it be a direct tax, the Constitution provides that "Representatives and direct taxes" are to be apportioned according to population—that is, each State must pay such portion of the amount to be collected as her number of Representatives in Congress indicates, or a certain portion or sum for each member she sends. As the law does not provide for this, the inevitable conclusion is that Congress and ADAM SMITH and JEAN BAPTIST SAY do not agree in the meaning of the word direct tax. And that conclusion arrived at, it is a "duty, impost or excise," all of which the Constitution declares "shall be uniform throughout the United States." Now, in making the uniformity, Congress might have made each man pay a certain uniform sum, or a uniform sum upon every man who has an income, or a uniform sum on each dollar of his income; but it found out another way, and adopted it, exempting uniformly every dollar of income under one thousand dollars, and putting the tax of five cents on every dollar of income beyond one thousand dollars. This is of course uniformity, and by extending the application of the principle, I propose to stop a good deal of grumbling. The discovery of Congress was that taxing all incomes beyond a certain limit, and leaving all below the limit untaxed, creates uniformity. Now let the limit be moved up. Fix it at one hundred thousand dollars instead of one thousand dollars, and multitudes will be relieved. The aggregate of the tax need not be diminished at all. With the principle of uniformity in view, let the amount to be paid on each dollar of income over one hundred thousand dollars be ten, or fifteen, or twenty, or even fifty cents. No man having patriotic feelings, who has to pay no tax on his first $100,000 of income, would think of scolding at paying a reasonable sum out of each dollar beyond that, especially when he would be consoled by the reflection that multitudes of his virtuous fellow-citizens, who were not so fortunate as to have an income of over $100,000, were relieved from paying a cent. Perhaps $100,000 per annum is not quite large enough. It may be that some of our worthy citizens who have to keep yachts and fast horses and fast—well, no matter what—may require more than that sum to meet their necessary expenses. This could be inquired into, and if their necessities, on an economical scale, should require $200,000 a year, fix the limit of non-taxable income at that. Make it liberal. I would not exactly advise putting the tax on the balance above the limit to more than fifty or possibly seventy-five cents on the dollar. There should be some margin left to induce enterprising gentlemen to add to their savings, and if you took all their surplus after they got to the limit, it might discourage them. But if the limit should be fixed at $200,000, gentlemen like Commodore VANDERBILT, Mr. ASTOR and Mr. STEWART would have that sum free of tax to pay their family expenses; and suppose they should pay fifty, or even seventy-five per cent. of the rest of their income, it would still leave them, at the end of each year, a fortune that I should be content with to add to their inventory.

POINT D'ARGENT.

The Sparrows—How They were Introduced and Cared For.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is believed that the Central Park Commissioners first introduced this useful bird into this City by their importation from Europe ten years ago. In June, 1866, a subscription book was opened at the suggestion of one of our public-spirited fellow-citizens, "to encourage, protect and provide for worm-destroying birds," and $130 was immediately subscribed, viz.: W. T. B., $20; R. L. S., $30; J. S., $20; A. R. E., $20; D. G. & Co., $10; S. L. M. B., $10; L. W. J., $10; J. B. D., $5; R. P., $5. From these and others since obtained, 1,000 neat bird-houses (each designed for two pairs) have been erected on the trees in five of our parks, as many more in the streets by citizens, and one or two hundred by the City. Two pairs of sparrows were all that Union Park could then claim; five more in Gramercy, and ten in Stuyvesant Park, and but one bird-house in the five parks. Not a bird-house has been erected at the Battery or Bowling-green; consequently not a sparrow is to be found there, while in all the church-yards, parks and squares, where good houses, water and food have been provided for them, they have come of their own accord, and are multiplying, useful and happy. By carefully providing them with water, food in the Winter, and the kind protection of the keepers of the parks and the Police, they have increased to over 10,000 in this City.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, July 31, 1869.

GHOSTLY VISITATIONS.

THE HOUSE OF REFUGE.

Habeas Corpus before the Superior Court—The Way Youths are Treated in the House of Refuge.

A lad named JOHN WARDELL was brought before Justice MCCUNN, of the Superior Court, yesterday, on a writ of habeas corpus, and his discharge from the House of Refuge demanded, on the ground that he was over 16 years of age when he was committed to it. The writ was granted on the petition of the lad's parents, JAMES and SARAH WARDELL. In the petition it is averred that the boy was committed to this institution in the month of December last. In giving their testimony, the parents stated that they were very confident that he was born in the Winter of 1852, but the month they could not specify. The statute of the State requires that persons over 16 years old, (under circumstances similar to that of this case,) must be sent to the Penitentiary.

Mr. DEADEY, an officer of the institution, opposed the discharge. Judge MCCUNN asked why it was that he wished to oppose the discharge of the lad, when both the parents insisted upon having him.

Mr. DEADEY replied that the boy was in a low grade at school, and the object of the managers of the institution in keeping him longer was to have him learn more about reading and writing.

JOHN WARDELL, the boy, was then put upon the stand, and testified that his business in the institution, for six hours each day, was to sand-paper shoes. His task was to sand-paper forty-five pairs of shoes each day. He slept at night in a cell.

Judge MCCUNN—This establishment is altogether too much like a prison.

Mr. DEADEY—I think your Honor would change your mind if you could see some of its management.

Judge MCCUNN—Why did you not set the boy to work to hoe cabbages, instead of having him waste his time in that useless occupation of sand-papering shoes?

Mr. DEADEY—We consider that a good mode of punishment. It is as a matter of discipline—as reformatory as any other. The main object is to reform the lads that are taken in there.

Judge MCCUNN—I will call up and examine the working of your institution.

Mr. DEADEY expressed the hope that the Judge would do so,

There being so much uncertainty about the age of the boy at the time he was sent to the House of Refuge, the Judge decided to have testimony taken upon that point, and adjourned the further hearing until Friday at 12 o'clock.

Movements of the President.

General GRANT and family left the City, on board the Mary Powell, at 3:30 P. M., yesterday, for Garrison's, on the east bank of the Hudson River, where he is to be the guest of Hon. HAMILTON FISH until Monday next. Yesterday morning he visited the Gold Room, in Wall-street while the sales were going on, and underwent an ordeal of handshaking during his stay among the excited brokers. At about 1:30 P. M. a large crowd gathered about the Post Office entrances, in the hope of seeing him, rumor having gone abroad that he was in the building on a visit to Postmaster JONES. It turned out, however, that he was not there, and, after being convinced of this fact, the crowd dispersed. General GRANT will not stop in this City on his return to Washington, on Monday, any longer time than is necessary to accompany his family to Mr. CORBIN's residence in West Twenty-seventh street; thence he will proceed to the Capital direct.

Killed by Kerosene—A New Law Needed.

The inquest in the case of Mrs. CAROLINE HAMBLIN, whose death was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, at No. 408 West Twenty-sixth-street, on the 29th ult., was concluded yesterday by Coroner ROLLINS. HERMANN ENDERMANN, Assistant Chemist for the Metropolitan Board of Health, was the only additional witness examined. He stated that the kerosene oil found at No. 408 West Twenty-sixth street, and which is said to have caused an explosion, takes fire and burns at a temperature of 70° F. The specific gravity is 70° B., equal 0.697. The kerosene oil found at the store in No. 139 West Nineteenth-street, which is said to be the same as that found at No. 408 West Twenty-sixth-street, takes fire and burns freely at a temperature of 68° F. The specific gravity is 70° B., equal 0.697. JOHN MORUM, of No. 139 West Nineteenth-street, testified that he deals in oils, and purchases the same from E. G. KELLY, agent for the New-York City Oil Company. He never sold any other kind of oil, having paid therefor thirty-four and thirty-two cents per gallon. He did not recollect selling any oil to Mr. HAMBLIN, though he knew customers came from Twenty-sixth-street. He supposed the oil to be good, and sold it for twelve cents per quart. KELLY's office is at No. 116 Maiden-lane, and the manufactory at Hunter's Point, L. I. The witness never tampered with the oil, but sold it direct from the barrel. On this evidence the jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to her death by burns inflicted by an oil proven to be highly explosive; therefore they recommended the Board of Health, Fire Commissioners, or any authority having power to do so, to enact an ordinance making it a punishable offence to manufacture and offer for sale an illuminating oil that shall evaporate at less than 100° Fahrenheit, and burn at less than 110°.

Base Ball—Atlantics Against Unions.

Owing to the rainy weather yesterday afternoon but a small number of spectators were present at the ball match between the Atlantics of Brooklyn, and the Unions of Morrisania. The ground was wet and slippery, preventing any good fielding and making the ball difficult to catch. As usual, the Atlantics won the game by heavy batting. The only inning which was at all exciting was the fifth, when the Unions "whitewashed" their opponents, who in turn "whitewashed" the Unions. The short stop of the latter did all the sharp playing for his side. During the last half of the game, NORTON, of the Unions, pitched for LYONS. The decisions of the umpire were unusually fair and prompt. The following is the score:

The Tailors' Strike.

The strike among the journeymen tailors still continues, but the indications are that it is drawing to a close. A compromise has been effected between many of the employers and the men, whereby a price list, containing an extra class of work, has been agreed upon; the men, in effect, receding from their demand for increased prices for the kinds of labor referred to in the list published in the TIMES of Tuesday, and getting additional pay for the class of labor mentioned in the amended scale. This amended price list has been signed and approved by Messrs. Devlin & Co., Shafer Brothers, Carhart & Whitford, Brockhart & Co., Pitt & Co., Steinhard & Adler, and Carhart & Whitford. It is understood, also, that the few firms which agreed to give the prices first asked by the men are willing to adopt the new arrangement. According to the terms agreed upon at the conference between the employers and the men, yesterday, however, the new scale of prices is not to go into effect until approved by all the first-class clothing houses in the City.

Escape of a Thief Before Trial.

A few days ago JAMES MORTON was arrested by Detective WOOLDRIDGE, of the Sixth Precinct, on a charge of stealing six dozen of vulture feathers, which were found in his possession. Justice HOGAN held the accused for trial and he was yesterday conveyed from the Tombs to the Court of General Sessions. As the District-Attorney was not ready to proceed with the prosecution, the prisoner was ordered to be remanded to the City Prison. Having been handcuffed MORTON left the Court-room under the charge of Officer STRIPP, and they proceeded in company nearly half way to the prison in Centre-street, when MORTON slipped his manacled hands in the waistband of his pantaloons in order to hide the handcuffs, and ran away. He was not recaptured.

Run Over and Killed—The Belt Railroad Company Censured.

Coroner ROLLINS held an inquest yesterday in the case of JAMES CLANCY, the boy who was run over by a Belt car. The testimony was to the effect that the deceased signaled the driver to stop his car, when the latter refused to do so, and called to the boy to jump. JAMES then endeavored to leap upon the front platform, but missed his hold and fell, the wheels of the car running over him and causing his death. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental death, and took occasion to severely censure the Railroad Company for not employing more experienced drivers on their road. The Coroner has issued a warrant for the arrest of the car-driver, MICHAEL MEAGHER, and will hold him to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Naval Court-Martial.

A Naval Court-martial convened at the Navy-yard, Brooklyn, yesterday, for the trial of ROBERT D. BOGART, late Paymaster's Clerk on board of the United States ship Vermont, charged with absconding with Government funds to the amount of $30,000 or $40,000, and with fraud in keeping the accounts. The Court is composed of the following officers: Captain John J. Almy, President; Paymaster John D. Gibson, Commander R. W. Shufeldt, Commander A. E. K. Benham, Lieutenant-Commander Chester Hatfield, Lieutenant-Commander Charles D. Sigsby, Paymaster Wm. W. Williams, Paymaster Garrett R. Barry, Judge Advocate.

Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

This Board met yesterday, Commissioner BOWEN in the Chair. A letter was received from Father DURANQUET, stating that he had authorised Father CHAMBERS to officiate at Randall's Island. The appointment of clerk at the Penitentiary was given to JAMES M. CULLEN. BARNES & BROTHER's offer to put a new railing in front of Jefferson Market Police Court for $271 was accepted, after which the Board adjourned.

Before Judge Blatchford.

PREFERENTIAL ASSIGNMENT—CLAIM OF COPARTNERSHIP PROPERTY BY ASSIGNEE IN BANKRUPTCY OF ONE COPARTNER.

In the matter of Thomas S. Shepard, a bankrupt.—This was a hearing on proofs taken on a petition filed in this matter by Hiram Fisher, assignee of the bankrupt, against Andrew V. Stone. Prior to the 26th of February, 1867, the bankrupt and one William D. Cochran were in partnership under the firm name of Shepard & Cochran, in the City of New-York. On that day an instrument in writing was executed by Shepard & Cochran, by which the partnership between the parties was dissolved from that date, by mutual consent, "except so far as it may be necessary to continue the same for the final liquidation and settlement of the business thereof." By the same instrument Cochran sold and transferred to Shepard all his interest in the assets, stock on hand, accounts and credits due the firm, and all other property of the firm; and Shepard was to apply said property and its proceeds to the payment of the partnership debts and the necessary expenses of carrying on the business. On the 5th of March, 1867, Shepard executed a voluntary assignment to Stone of all the merchandise and other personal property lately owned by the firm, and of all claims and demands due to the late firm, with the books of account and papers relating to the same, being all the property in respect of which Cochran had transferred his interest to Shepard. The assignment was in trust to convert the property into money and collect the claims and demands, and, after paying the expenses of carrying the assignment into effect, to pay, first, debts specified in schedule A; second, those specified in schedule B, and, third, all other demands for which Shepard was justly liable. The debts specified in the two schedules were debts due by the firm of Shepard & Cochran, and were stated to be such in the schedules. Stone accepted the trust, entered into possession of the assigned property, and realised from sales and collections a little over $21,000. On the 27th of March, 1867, the National Shoe and Leather Bank of the City of New-York recovered a judgment against Shepard & Cochran and two other alleged partners as joint debtors. An execution on such judgment having been returned unsatisfied, the plaintiffs therein brought a suit in equity against the four judgment debtors and Stone, praying that the assignment to Stone might be declared fraudulent and void, and set aside, and that it might be adjudged that the plaintiffs were entitled to payment of their judgment out of the proceeds in the hands of Stone, and that Stone pay over the same. No answer or defence was put in in either of the suits. On the 13th of June, 1867, a judgment was rendered in the equity suit setting aside the assignment, adjudging that the plaintiffs were entitled to the payment of their judgment for $15,280 88 out of the assets in the hands of Stone, and directing Stone to pay the amount. On the 14th of June, 1867, Stone, as assignee, paid to the plaintiffs the amount decreed. He also, before the 13th of June, 1867, paid out of the assets all the claims specified in schedule A. There still remained in his hands about $1,700, which he claimed to be entitled to retain and apply to the purposes of the assignment. On the 3d of July, 1867, the Mechanics' Bank of Brooklyn, as a creditor of Shepard, filed a petition in this Court praying that Shepard might be declared a bankrupt for certain alleged acts of bankruptcy, and among them the making of the assignment to Stone. In that proceeding Shepard was adjudged a bankrupt and Fisher was appointed his assignee, and the usual transfer of the property of the bankrupt was made to Fisher. The petition of Fisher in the present matter is brought to have the assignment to Stone declared null and void under the provisions of sections 35 and 39 of the Bankruptcy act, and the property which came into his possession under it, or the full value thereof, delivered to Fisher as assignee, on the ground that the assignment was made by Shepard with intent to give preferences, when he was insolvent, and so known to be by Stone. The petition is not at all founded on the preference obtained by the Shoe and Leather Bank by the equity suit, nor on the payment made by Stone under the decree in that suit. It does not set up such suit or decree, but the answer of Stone sets them up in defence.

BLATCHFORD, J.—There is a difficulty in this case which lies at the threshold of Fisher's right to recover. The agreement of the 26th of February, 1867, whatever effect it may have had to dissolve the partnership between Shepard and Cochran as to future business and debts to be contracted thereafter, had no such effect as respected the partnership property in which Cochran theretofore had an interest, or as respected the partnership debts named in that agreement, or as respected proceedings under the Bankruptcy act to affect such partnership property. The agreement expressly declares that there is to be no dissolution of the partnership so far as it may be necessary to continue the same for the final liquidation and settlement of the business thereof, and the transfer to Shepard of Cochran's interest in the property of the firm is expressly made subject by the agreement to the trust that Shepard is to apply the property and the proceeds thereof to the payment of the partnership debts. The case is not one where the transfers of the interest of the retiring partner in the partnership property is absolute, and the remaining partner merely agrees to pay and assumes the debts of the partnership, as was done in Robb vs. Mudge, 14 Gray, 534. In the present case Cochran took from Shepard an express agreement that the partnership property assigned and its proceeds should be applied by Shepard to pay the partnership debts, and the agreement made by Shepard was to pay those debts with that property. Therefore as respected Cochran and the creditors of the firm, there was no dissolution of the partnership and no such transfer to Shepard as would make the property until and unless the partnership debts were first paid. This being so there must be an adjudication of bankruptcy against the partners composing the firm, and an assignee must be appointed before any step can be taken to reach in bankruptcy the partnership assets. Shepard alone has been adjudged a bankrupt. As there are partnership assets the partnership continues as respects proceedings in bankruptcy. Under the provisions of section 36 of the act, the copartnership property cannot be taken and administered by the Bankruptcy Court unless all the persons who have an interest as copartners in such property are adjudged bankrupt. In order to reach such property it is necessary under section 36, that Fisher shall have been appointed assignee in a proceeding against all of such copartners. He is only the assignee of the individual and separate estate of Shepard in a proceeding in bankruptcy against Shepard alone. He shows therefore no title to call Stone or any one else to account in respect of the property which purported to have been assigned by Cochran to Shepard, and by Shepard to Stone. These views dispose of the case without reference to any of the other questions raised or discussed. It is not necessary to decide whether any other persons than Shepard and Cochran were members of the firm, as on the status of the partnership property as left by the agreement between Shepard and Cochran it is immaterial whether or not there were other partners in the firm. The petition must be dismissed with costs.

A. L. Cushing for Fisher; E. L. Fancher for Stone.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE.

Before Commissioner Shields.

ILLICIT OPERATIONS IN WHISKY.

Nathan Kingsley, a prominent member of metropolitan political circles, was arrested on a charge of having violated the 36th section of the act approved July 20, 1868. Jerome B. Wass, a United States Internal Revenue officer, was the complainant. He deposed that five barrels of distilled spirits, on which no tax had been paid, were taken from the vinegar and white wine manufactory of N. Kingsley & Son, at No. 153 Franklin-street, and subsequently removed to some other place than the distillery warehouse provided by law. He alleged that the defendant and five other persons, at present unknown, were abettors to the removal of the liquor, and that they assisted in the concealment of the barrels. The defendant was very indignant at the charge. He gave bail to appear to-day at 3 o'clock for examination, Mr. Wm. H. McKenna, Register to the Croton Aqueduct Department, becoming his bondsman in the sum of $2,000.

Before Commissioner Jones.

EXTENSIVE TRAFFIC IN CANCELED REVENUE STAMPS.

The following-named persons were charged with being implicated in the practice of cleaning and reissuing canceled revenue stamps: Timothy Murray, Thomas Byrnes, S. H. Harrison, John McCartney, Frederick Haltze, Patrick Carroll, James Woods, Geo. C. Haggerty, Thos. Burnam, Michael Burns, Chas. Fogart, Thos. Barnard and James Laird. Woods, the alleged principal in the frauds, was required to give $5,000 bail. His accessories in the criminal transaction were held in the sum of $1,000 each. They all secured bondsmen with the exception of one or two. Carroll and Haggerty were detained by the Government as witnesses against their companions. An examination was commenced in the case of Murray, Laird and Barnard, who were accused of having secured the canceled stamps for other parties in their capacity as janitors. They were defended by Mr. Crawford. General Jackson, Assistant District-Attorney, conducted the prosecution. The first witness was an operator in the Secret Service Department of the United States. He testified that he arrested Barnard at his place of employment, at Nos. 8 and 10 Wall-street, but was unable to find any stamps in his possession. Laird was taken yesterday at No. 30 Broad-street; he confessed that he had made one or two "deals" in the stamps with an unknown party some time ago. Two canceled stamps, which appeared to have been cleaned, were discovered in a tin box lying on a bureau belonging to his apartments. The defendant told the officer that the purchaser of the stamps had represented that he wanted them for a book collection.

Murphy was arrested at No. 19 Broad-street, with several bundles of checks, deeds, &c., containing canceled stamps, in his possession. He acknowledged that he had sold a quantity of defaced stamps to an unknown man. The examination was adjourned until Saturday at 10 o'clock. At the commencement of the case the counsel for the prisoners desired to produce their statement in evidence, but the Commissioner ruled that the testimony of a prisoner in his behalf was inadmissable, basing his decision on the decision of Judge Benedict in the Henry case.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

Elizabeth Regley was convicted of stealing three lace curtains, valued at $86, the property of Mrs. Sarah H. Monell, of No. 123 West Twenty-seventh-street. She was sentenced to the Penitentiary for three months. Two prisoners, named Morton and Roberts, who were arraigned on an indictment for larceny, made an attempt to escape while being conveyed to the Tombs by Officer Stripp. They both slipped off their handcuffs, and then ran off in different directions. Roberts succeeded in getting away, but Morton was rearrested.

A CORRECTION.

Gerold Donadi, the keeper of a restaurant in Eighth-avenue and Thirtieth-street, charged by Charles and Ellen Lear with attempting to commit a rape on their daughter, as noticed in our reports of the Jefferson Market Court proceedings, was honorably discharged in the Court of General Sessions, the parents admitting that the charge, made on the statement of their daughter, could not be sustained.

POLICE COURTS.

The Tombs—Kelly, Justice.

SHOPLIFTERS.

Detective Hayes, of the Second Precinct, arrested Patrick Moore, Jenny Sullivan and Mary Dowd yesterday, on a charge of shoplifting. The prisoners entered the store of Philip Mann, at No. 38 South-street, and stole four shirts, which were found in their possession. They were remanded.

THE RENT SWINDLER.

Geo. P. Keating, recently arrested on a charge of obtaining rents from tenants under false pretences, was yesterday arraigned. Elizabeth Stewart, of No. 109 Amity-street, testified that he called on her on the 2d inst. and stated that he had been sent by her landlord, Mr. John N. Gardiner, for the rent. She paid him $120. Mr. Gardiner, of No. 86 Hoyt-street, Brooklyn, testified that he had given the prisoner no authority for the collection of any of his rents, especially that due by Mrs. Stewart. The Magistrate held the prisoner for trial.

STEALING MONEY.

Lewis Thomas, of No. 502 Grand-street, caused the arrest of William Rafferty, his employe, yesterday, on a charge of stealing $280 from his money-drawer. As the evidence was rather incomplete the prisoner was temporarily committed.

Essex Market—Shandley, Justice.

Officer Lynch, of the Seventh Ward, arrested yesterday morning W. Reagan and Margaret, his wife, for disorderly conduct. The officer in trying to arrest Reagan received several blows from him. Committed.

Josephine Wood, Nellie Lopez and Alice Clide were held for examination for beating Nellie Reid, of No. 212 Wooster-street, with a cane.

THURSDAY, Aug. 5—P. M.

The Treasury Office sold at noon to-day $1,000,000 Gold at 136.18 ℔ cent. to Messrs. BUDGE, SCHIFF & Co., as the highest bidders, under seal, for this amount advertised to be disposed of. The further sum of $3,400,000 was bid for by other parties at lower figures. After the award was made public the sales of Gold in the Gold Room advanced to 136¼@136⅝ ℔ cent. No particular reason was assigned for this rise on yesterday's sales of ⅛@¼ ℔ cent. beyond the influence of the higher bid for the Government million of dollars. The Foreign Exchanges are in no respect higher than for the Cunarder yesterday, except that all the leading drawers are ready to accept 110 ℔ cent. for sixty days on London, and 110⅝ for short sight. The rates for Money are again easy at 6@7 ℔ cent., on call, to the Brokers, and the market moves with much steadiness, though the close approach to the Fall demand for Currency to move the crops is against any reasonable calculation upon very cheap Money, or upon any decided superabundance of balances for employment in Washington, for the remainder of the season. It may be remarked, however, that, without reference to the cost of carrying Stocks, a strong support to the Public Funds is found in the large and regular purchases of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the influence which these have upon holders outside the Street, in creating the belief that prices will go still higher, and that no class of Stocks will pay better for the next few months to hold on to. This opinion, whether substantially founded or not, is encouraged first by the fact that nothing is so thoroughly sound as an investment as the Public Funds, and secondly, by the circumstance that holders who changed their securities at 110 ℔ cent. last year have seen the price advance 12 or 13 ℔ cent., while the Bonds which they bought in exchange remain at much the same market price as in July and August, 1868. We have no particular advice to volunteer on this point beyond the expression of the belief that the settled Sinking Fund policy of the Administration is likely, in the course of a few months, to bring United States 5-20s and American Gold Coin upon a par with each other. We have no present belief that this policy will be changed or modified through the Fall months by reason of the condition of the Currency Revenues of the Treasury, since the surplus Gold Customs of the Government which are large and increasing, can be readily converted, and will be to a considerable extent should the Sinking Fund require it and the market price of Gold induce the conversion.

At the close of the day for the current month the Customs demand for Gold was $758,000, making about $2,300,000 for the four business days of the week. It is possible that this demand may have been felt upon the price in the Gold Room, which was 136⅝@⅞ ℔ cent. at 4 o'clock. The Currency balance in the Treasury Office was reduced to-day $1,582,000, which contributed to the ease in Money, though a good part of these disbursements are made in National Bank Notes. The proceeds of the sale of Gold to-day can be paid into the Treasury Office to-morrow in the same medium, if more convenient than Greenbacks, to the purchaser.

On the Stock Exchange the Public Funds were not quite so active as yesterday. In the forenoon, however, the 5-20s of 1867 brought 123 ℔ cent., falling back at the 2:15 P. M. Government Board to 122¾ ℔ cent. The 10-40 years 5 ℔ cents sold up to 116⅛ ℔ cent., and the Currency 6 ℔ cents again brought 121⅛ and accrued interest. The Southern State Bond list was again weak for new Tennessees, but partially better for Missouris and North Carolinas. The Railway movement was weak for the New-York (Vanderbilt) Stocks, and quite strong and active on Michigan Southern (Lake Shore) and the St. Pauls, Rock Island and Northwests. A new interest appears in Rock Island, and the stock, after several weeks of steady dullness at about 114@114½ ℔ cent., suddenly rose to 116¾ ℔ cent. There is no trace of the source of the new purchases, beyond an intimation that the great Pennsylvania Corporation after absorbing the Fort Wayne line from Pittsburg to Chicago, is disposed to arrange for a common interest from Chicago to Omaha, having already made connection from St. Louis West with the Missouri Pacific and the Kansas (Eastern Division,) Pacific, through the States of Missouri and Kansas and so on to Denver in Colorado. It is probably news to most New-Yorkers of the Stock Exchange that an alliance between the Pennsylvania and Rock Island and Pacific Roads is in contemplation, and the news may not be true; but the American correspondent of the London Times, who resides in Philadelphia, and is evidently "well up" in the affairs of the Pennsylvania Company, several weeks ago intimated that this would probably be the connection between Chicago and Omaha. If so, the New-York and Lake Shore Roads (North and South Shores) will have to cultivate kindly relations with the Chicago and Northwest and Chicago and Burlington, in self-defence.

CUBA.

Cuban news is received from revolutionary sources to the 26th ult. QUESADA was still in control of the communication between the coast and Puerto Principe. The Spanish volunteers were committing all sorts of outrages on the people in and about Puerto Principe, and the latter were suffering for supplies. Fighting was reported in General JORDAN'S command. The Cubans expected to get complete control of affairs in the Eastern Department after twenty days' decisive action.

The steamship Missouri, from Havana, July 31, reached this port yesterday. By the courtesy of the Purser, we are in receipt of our letters and papers, which recount, from a Spanish standpoint, the rebel assault on Puerto Principe, and the repulse. At latest mail advices the ill fortune of the insurgents continued, the forces of JORDAN, MARMOL, MARCANO and FIGUEREDO having attacked simultaneously the Spanish detachments on the estates La Cruz, Santa and Sitio, San Jose and Santa Isabel, as also those of the Palma Soriano village, and having been driven back at all points.

Hon. SIDNEY CLARKE, Chairman of the Congressional Committee on Indian Affairs, held a council on Sunday last with the chiefs and counselors of the Osage Indians, in Kansas, to find out their opinion of the "Sturges treaty" of May, 1865, whereby they had agreed to sell their lands to Sturges, or the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston Railroad, for 19 cents an acre. They denounced the treaty as a fraud and a swindle, and asserted that they were driven to sign it by threats. Mr. CLARKE promised to lay their grievances before the authorities at Washington.

The President and His Detractors.

We have no particular call to take the blunders of our Democratic politicians and journals to heart. At the same time we believe in parties; we think the country is apt to be better governed when party organization is thorough, and pretty sure to be ill-governed when there is no effective opposition. It is from this point of view that we regret the line of attack upon the President, into which the opposition party has fallen. In the absence of any substantial grounds for controversy, it seems to be regarded as the fit and proper thing to dog the President's footsteps wherever he goes, to belittle his employments, to give him the appearance of being habitually surrounded and engrossed with trifling or equivocal company, with consulting his personal ease to the neglect of his public duties, and in general to be a man who really has no comprehension of the great interests committed to his charge.

Now, as we have already remarked, we accept no responsibility for the blunders of the gentlemen who preside in the councils of the Democratic Party, at the same time it is but neighborly for us to notify them that, in our opinion, they are making a grievous blunder in the course they are now pursuing toward our Chief Magistrate.

It is never worth while for an individual or a party to make war until they have cause of war and have counted the cost of making it. Now in this case the Democracy have no grievances. They are trying to belittle and degrade the President by publishing stories and gossip from which every gentleman, and a President more than any other person, is entitled to exemption. And what will come of it? The public, the country, will not judge the President by the number of horses he drives, by the number of cigars he smokes, by the places he frequents during the heats of Summer, by the number of days or weeks he remains in or out of Washington, or by the class of people who get access to his presence as a means of getting their names into the newspapers. These are matters about which the great body of the nation are indifferent. They wish to know, and are willing to wait a proper time to learn, how the President is attending to their business, having no particular curiosity to know how he attends to his own. Now, when the time comes for the state of public business to be officially and fully submitted to them, they will find some results which will probably put the flippant critics who give forth the oracles for the Democratic Party in an embarrassing position. Let us enumerate some of the results of the brief five months of President GRANT'S Administration, which may be cited to the public in response to the charge that the public service is neglected.

We were told in October last by the same oracles that now find it so difficult, in speaking of the President, to respect the ordinary proprieties of social life, that there would be a deficiency in our revenues for the fiscal year just closed of one hundred and fifty-four millions of dollars. That is what they regarded as the best prospect the future had to offer us financially, nine months ago.

Now, what has this idle, cigar-smoking horse-jockey of a President accomplished during the brief five months that he has had such control of the Government as Congress accorded to him?

By a greater care in the selection of trustworthy agents, and by a vigorous enforcement of the law, the revenues have so rapidly increased that the direct debt of the Government has already, since his inauguration, been reduced between forty-three and forty-four millions of dollars. The revenues from whisky and tobacco alone have more than doubled. A reduction of the army from forty regiments to twenty-five is to result in a further saving of many millions.

The effects of the new policy of the Government toward the Indians cannot now be appreciated, but enough is already known to make a further economy in that direction that must be estimated by millions. Our Federal securities are worth to-day at least $250,000,000 more than they were worth the day our President was inaugurated, and are advancing at the rate of ten or fifteen millions a week. There is no doubt of our ability to fund the entire national debt within a year at a rate of interest not exceeding four and a half per cent. We are sure of a surplus at the end of the current fiscal year of from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000, and it is no longer a question that our revenues will justify a large reduction of our taxes.

These are all facts which our Democratic friends may safely take upon our authority, and we ask them now in all candor whether the people are going to believe that the President who can cipher up such a year's work as this outline gives the promise of, is neglecting their interests or his duty. Will they not feel inclined rather to withdraw their confidence from their party oracles, who prove to them such blind guides, and transfer it to a President whose recreations prove so advantageous to the country?

The Academy at West Point.

The proposition of the Board of Visitors to West Point, this year, is a bold one. It is that the Military Academy shall be greatly enlarged, the number of pupils greatly increased, and the whole institution organized on a new and more extensive plan. Now, hitherto, the appearance of the West Point Appropriation bill in Congress has been the signal for a fierce onslaught upon the Academy. The annual cry of its opponents is "Cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?" So it was last Winter, when Generals SCHENCK, BUTLER and LOGAN attacked West Point and the regular army, and when only by much adroitness the appropriations were saved intact. The same close struggle goes on every year; and it is for this reason that we have called the new proposal a bold one.

Now, the reckless suggestion to "abolish the Military Academy," is, of course, worth little discussion; hardly a petty State in Europe is too small or has too lean a purse to support not only its standing army, but its school of officers, and for a nation like ours to try to do without either is preposterous. While plenty of material for the rank and file can always be had, no matter to what size our armies are swelled, there never has been a surplus of good officers in the service. The enemies of West Point misrepresent it when they style it a "charity school," where superfluous office holders are brought up. The officers of volunteers who had risen highest, and done the most effective service, at the end of the late war, were graduates of West Point—GRANT, SHERMAN, SHERIDAN, MEADE, THOMAS, HANCOCK and so on. It has been shown by a statistician that the entire cost of maintaining this great school since its founding in 1802, has been less than a week's war expenses during the late rebellion—and how many weeks' war expenses it saved!

Besides, even under the present organization, we never have had to make places in the army for West Pointers. A large proportion of them, after having given to the service of the country some of their most vigorous years, go back to civil life. They are not lost to the country there—they save it the expense of their maintenance. With the first note of war, you find them in the field—their old military knowledge ready for use, and bettered by experience with men. So it was at the outbreak of the Mexican war, when there were nearly as many graduates in civil life as in the army—and the greater part of the former lent their swords to the country; and "but for our graduated cadets," said SCOTT, "the war between the United States and Mexico might, and probably would, have lasted some four or five years." GRANT and SHERMAN, our two most successful Generals, were both in civil life at the opening of the rebellion—so were many other graduates of the Academy, whose services we as promptly had.

West Point has furnished to the country not only 2,300 educated officers, at an annual expense, as General CULLUM says, from 1802 to 1869, "not greater than that of maintaining a single squadron of cavalry," but many excellent engineers and explorers. The fortification of our frontiers, our coastwise defence, the coast survey, our railway and canal systems, our river, lake and harbor improvements, our factories, our myriad enterprises of civil engineering—these, as well as our wars, attest the national work which West Point has for half a century been doing, and the large return it has made for so comparatively trivial an outlay.

We note these facts because it is evidently on this ground that the Board of Visitors will ask Congress to support its present move for an enlargement of organization. The recommendation is that the Academy shall be divided into two classes of pupils, with two courses of study, whereof one shall be more thoroughly and exclusively military than the other. In order to prevent any difficulties about appointments after graduation, it will be arranged that a portion of the graduates each year shall at once return to civil life, while, of course, the system of promotion to the army will be changed.

What the Board in effect says is: We must have more of this cheap education of officers—more able men who, at slight expense, can be trained to the military art, who will pursue their own paths of usefulness and honor in the nation till needed for its defence, costing it not a penny after graduation, but bound in honor to give it aid in the moment of exigency. And, talk as we please of economizing in military education, it is sure that no other country gets so large direct return at so little cost. The army can still be kept down to any point Congress may wish, while the educational facilities at West Point are utilized for the benefit of a greater number of pupils. Now that buildings are erected, the Academy well established, and professorships founded, double the number of students could be trained there at only half additional cost.

But in any movement to "raise the Academy to a position unsurpassed in Europe," we must first raise the standard of qualification for admission. It is now ridiculously low as may be seen from glancing at the general studies pursued during the first year—studies in most of which the applicant for admission should already have been proficient. One reason, indeed, why scientific education is not pushed further at West Point is that so much time is lost in teaching what should have been learned before entering. That this, however, is not time wasted is clear from the Board's report of deficiencies in the branches alluded to. The best remedy for the whole trouble is to stop making appointments to cadetships mere matters of political or family influence and favoritism, and to distribute them wholly on competitive examination.

What We Import from Paris.

The last Consular report of Mr. NICOLAY, dated Paris, April 29, 1868, exhibits in tabular form the commercial movement thence to the United States during the period extending from July 1, 1863, to Dec. 31, 1868. The grand total for the five and a half years is $737,839,831, made up as follows:

1863 (six months)	$54,288,403
1864	82,345,531
1865	139,141,569
1866	180,617,837
1867	149,994,256
1868	131,457,295

The minimum trade of the period was reached in the Fall and Winter of 1864. The decline from more than thirty millions in the first quarter of that year to little more than seven and a half millions in the fourth quarter, shows the suddenness and extent of the depression. Again, the period of expansion which extended over 1865, 1866 and 1867, attained its maximum in the second of those years; the amount in the third quarter of that year having exceeded fifty-five millions. The year 1868 exhibits a recurrence of the downward tendency, which may go much further without interfering with the substantial comforts of the American people.

Our imports from Paris consist in a great degree of superfluities. Of the thirty-six articles comprised in the schedule, much the larger proportion represent luxury. They tell of expensive tastes, and a somewhat reckless readiness to gratify them. They reveal the chief sources of supply for elegant and costly costume, and the extent to which lavish expenditures have been carried in an era of factitious prosperity. Of course, for Parisian articles, ladies are the great consumers. The articles of actual utility are fractional in value compared with those which enter exclusively into ladies' use. Thus, taking the year 1866 as the basis of illustration, the reported value of merinoes, bombazines and crape was not less than $39,222,500; silks absorbed $6,799,198; shawls, $3,832,505; kid gloves, $7,046,800; flowers and artificial feathers, $3,549,035; fancy goods, $8,605,087; buttons and trimmings, $8,701,278; laces, $2,478,620; jewelry and precious stones, $7,321,023; miscellaneous dry goods, $16,548,276. Here are ten articles which in one year represent, in the cost prices at Paris, an aggregate of $104,104,312; and this sum was at least doubled when the consumers paid their accounts. And in this recapitulation we take no notice of the Paris boots and shoes, the hair, and the minor et cætera of which the ladies are the sole buyers. Nor does any statement founded upon certified invoices indicate the full extent to which the Paris trade is indebted to American buyers. To render this view complete, we must add the sums expended by American visitors, who are supposed to make their purchases without the slightest reference to cost.

The Progress of Reconstruction—The Good Spirit of the South.

There is much that is peculiarly gratifying in the ovation paid to GEORGE PEABODY at White Sulphur Springs. It was a proof of the right spirit in the very class from which we most needed to have it—the wealthy planters and the political leaders. The right spirit of the Southern masses in connection with Mr. PEABODY'S educational enterprise had been previously attested by the exceeding cordiality and hearty coöperation with which the trustees of the fund were everywhere received, on their Southern visit, by all, irrespective of social position. Their testimony left no doubt that the people were on their side, however their leaders behind the scenes might feel. But now the leaders have spoken for themselves. The gathering at White Sulphur embraced the foremost men from every portion of the South, brought together without concert for purposes of health and enjoyment, and in every respect strictly representative of that order of society which in other days was known as the "ruling class" of the South. At their head was Ex-Governor WISE, who has been, since the war, the most irreconcilable and impracticable of all extremists. When Southerners of this stamp join with such ardor in rendering homage to the man who has opened the way for universal education throughout the South, we may accept it as an earnest of a complete moral revolution in the South, a sure pledge of not only civil reconstruction, but, what is infinitely better yet, of moral regenerations. We may talk as we please about "the Reconstruction laws" of Congress and the administrative policy of the President, yet all laws, measures and policies for Southern restoration shrink into insignificance when compared with what this scheme of education is doing and will do.

It was a remark of the philosopher [illegible] NITZ which was often on the tongue of that most practical man of modern times, BONAPARTE, "Give me public instruction for a century, and I will transform the world." The transcendent bearing of popular education upon the vital interests of every nation was a political truth universally recognized by the founders of our Government, and one of their chief cares was to provide for its effective working. Our success as a Republic has been mainly owing to the fact of their establishing, at an early day, an educational system of unequaled excellence. It is a pregnant fact that just so far as that system was made inoperative, to just that extent did disloyalty finally take root and insubordination spring up. The supremely selfish institution of slavery excluded popular education as against its interests, and it was the popular ignorance thus produced that alone made it possible for demagogues to play freely upon the passion of the South, and "precipitate it into revolution." Nothing is more certain than that South Carolina would have been to this day as clear of rebellion as Massachusetts, if her people had been as well instructed. And even now we should quite despair that South Carolina would ever redeem herself and become the orderly, noble, powerful State she ought to be—were it not that she means to educate her people, and thus give them a new character. The vast majority of that people is now made up of negroes fresh from brutalizing bondage, and of that benighted, degraded sort of white men peculiar to the Southern States, that used to be known as "poor white trash." A ballot-box controlled by such a stolid, debased medley of races, would inevitably open the way to unequal laws, social war and anarchy, were it not for the restraint of the good principles and good sense and good manners which only education can give. It is for the talismanic power of public instruction alone to pervade the mass of the community in every Southern State with elevating and humanizing influences, and to soothe to unbroken slumber the unruly passions which have raged with such fearful havoc. It is glorious, beyond expression, that the South has at last recognized that true talisman, and is so eagerly appropriating it.

Turkey and Egypt.

The dispute between the Sultan of Turkey and the Viceroy of Egypt bids fair to assume serious proportions. Such, at least, must be the case if it prove correct, as announced by cable, that the former potentate is about to dispatch a special emissary to demand from the Viceroy "satisfactory explanations" of his recent conduct, under pain of the withdrawal of the privileges accorded by the celebrated Imperial firman of 1841. This, of course, would be a most decided step, and one likely to produce serious political complications throughout Europe. The settlement of 1841, though since modified by further concessions on the part of Turkey, was the great triumph of Lord PALMERSTON'S Eastern diplomacy, by which he at once rescued Turkey from the dangers attendant upon Russian "protection," guarded her against the ambitious designs of MEHEMET ALI, and thwarted France, whose foreign policy, then directed by M. THIERS, aimed at the aggrandisement of the latter at the expense of Turkey. Since then the policy of the successors of MEHEMET ALI has been to develop the material resources of Egypt by the aid of the appliances of modern civilization, to secure the benefits of a strong and orderly Government, and at the same time to cultivate, as far as possible, separate relations with European Powers, and thereby obtain, by all peaceable means, a fuller share of independent power for Egypt as a nation. Two years ago, however, the Sultan granted to the present Viceroy the right to the title of "Khedive"—an approximate equivalent to that of "King"—and since that date his ambition has evidently prompted him to more daring schemes and more energetic measures for realizing the objects at which he aims. His two recent tours in Europe were not undertaken with the object only of witnessing reviews and purchasing agricultural implements. He has set his heart upon becoming an independent Monarch in reality, free from all obligation to furnish subsidies or contingents to the Porte, as well as from any moral acknowledgment of Turkish sovereignty. And that he must have received encouragement in some influential quarter is evident from the increasing boldness of his recent assumptions of independent authority. The action said to have been taken by the Turkish Government, however, must inevitably bring matters to a crisis. The Khedive, in his present temper, and with his present resources, would certainly fight rather than tamely suffer himself to be reduced to the position of vassalage to which he would be by the revocation of the firman of 1841. And yet if the Sultan has made up his mind to demand "satisfactory explanation," he can scarcely be content with anything less than the total abandonment of the Viceroy's recent pretensions.

There is danger in the situation, beyond a doubt, as in the present state of Europe a repetition of the days of MEHEMET ALI would set the entire continent in a blaze. Whether the Great Powers will unite in good faith, and preserve the peace by enforcing a compromise, or whether sides have already been taken in view of an inevitable outbreak, remains to be seen. But we see no reason to believe that any European Power can possibly desire a general war at the present moment; and as long as that is the case there is strong ground for hope that judicious diplomacy may avert a collision between the Sultan and his ambitious tributary.

In ANTHONY FONBLANQUE'S new novel, Out Adrift, there is a little bit of satire on slap-dash journalism, which is not without application in America. "What the deuce do you know about German politics?" said Beckwith one day when the telegram arrived. "Nothing at all," he replied, with one of his jolly laughs, "that's why I am going to write a slashing article about them. A little knowledge you know, old man, is a dangerous thing; I've no knowledge at all on this subject, so I'm all right. When you write about Germans and Germany, write what no one can understand, and it will pass for wisdom, especially when it is translated." So he corrected BISMARCK on all points, and set the world to rights.

The attempts that have been begun to Christianize the Chinese pagans of California, have met with remarkable success. The Chinamen learn to read our language rapidly and receive the Christian ideas willingly. Their paganism sits on them lightly, and it seems more easy for them to throw it off than for any other pagans in the world. In China itself, Christian missions have made but little impression. The Roman Catholics have had missions there for centuries, but, after all, what do they show for their labors? We suppose this may be attributed in great part to the fact that the governing authorities and governing classes in China (who possess extraordinary authority over the people) have always used the full measure of their power for the suppression of Christianity, and, until recent years, have persecuted Christian converts with great severity. It is true that the new policy of China permits the propagation of the Western religion; but it will take time for Christianity to obtain any great advantage from this change. The Chinamen who come to this country are at once freed from all the pagan influence of their native land. They are quickly opened to the reception of new ideas and new truths; and we believe it is in the power of the Christian Church to convert the whole of them from paganism within a few years after their arrival on our shores.

The President of the United States, on a casual visit to this City, passing from Long Branch to the Hudson River Summer residence of Secretary FISH, had occasion on Tuesday to call, alone, on business, at the office of the United States District-Attorney, in Chambers-street. The District-Attorney, Judge PIERREPONT, it seems, was out of town, but to arrive at this fact, and the further information as to when he would be in the City, the President was subjected to several very curt, not to say rude replies, from one of Judge PIERREPONT'S assistants. In the sequel the identity of the President was discovered, and an awkward apology tendered, as it would not have been, probably, to a less conspicuous personage, though really due to any gentleman who might have taken exception to the incivility of this thoughtless deputy servant of the Government. We hope the lesson in good manners, growing out of this incident, may be properly improved, and that hereafter all civil applicants, whether of low or high degree, for information at our public offices, will be met with civil answers.

After the Napoleonic coup d'état, the chief point on which the Emperor insisted was the absence of responsible Ministers. They were called undemocratic impediments of the national will. The imperial Ego is the nation itself. Now, the system of a responsible Ministry is introduced to save the dynasty. The "initiative" was distinctly declared to belong to the Executive. Now, the initiative is distinctly given to the representatives. Other vital changes in the Imperial system we might notice. The Napoleonic idea that public liberty and political wisdom find their best expression and support through an autocrat originally elected, or descending from one originally elected, by the nation, is drawing to its end. The first NAPOLEON stated this idea—an old Asiatic one, by the way—in a letter to the Minister of the Interior, in which he calls the Government, the Executive, the real representative of the people! This letter is printed in the collection published by his nephew.

It is unjust, not to say absurd, to assert that the Administration ordered the seizure of the gunboats said to be building for the Spanish Government in order to make a display of zeal in the impartial enforcement of the Neutrality laws; and to quote, as evidence of this, the fact that work has been resumed on the boats, and that no officers are in possession of them. It is entirely proper that pending the inquiry which the Government will make as to the character of the boats, their destination and purposes, the work on them should not be interrupted to the damage of the contractors and owners, who may prove, on a legal examination, justified in all that they have done.

The Board of Health has at last taken a step toward suppressing the sale of dangerous kerosene; and it is the sensible step of prosecuting the vendors. The Sanitary Superintendent said that most of these who violated the law in this matter, "claimed to be ignorant of the fact that they were selling a dangerously explosive naphtha or benzine instead of kerosene." We have no doubt that this is true. But the best way to make these parties careful as to what they sell, is by prosecuting them for infringement of the law, and subjecting them to its penalties. The dealers and retailers will soon find out their duty after they have read of a few prosecutions.

There has been no sign that the Carlist movement in Spain has any real power with the Spanish people. The whole business is the work of a few conspirators, and the slight disturbances they have been able to get up here and there, have been stimulated by the money they used among a few purchasable "patriots." There are far more formidable elements of danger to the Regency than the Carlist element, which has so frequently forced itself into prominence of late.

There are two ways, if not more, by which fame may be acquired. One is, to get yourself appointed Ambassador and negotiate great treaties;—the other is to invent a style of shirt collar. Mr. BURLINGAME has accomplished both of these feats. The first—to wit: his Chinese diplomacy—has secured the occasional mention of his name in the newspapers. The other—to wit: the shirt-collar invention—has secured him something like glory. It has affixed his picture on myriads of collar boxes. It has raised his portrait in thousands of furnishing stores. It has made his name an article of commerce; and not only this, but it is constantly referred to, in social economy, by millions of young men—to say nothing of young women. In Paris, London and New-York—in all the large cities and most of the small towns of the civilized world—one may see his name displayed, and hear it spoken of, as the author of the Burlingame collar. But how few of those who know of him in this connection, could give any idea of his ambassadorial position, or of the world-changing treaties he has negotiated. "Such is fame!"

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.

In briefly recording the great success of Mr. JEFFERSON'S reappearance as Rip Van Winkle, at this theatre, we observed that in all essential points he exhibited the familiar delicacy, gentleness and refinement which have obtained for him so high a reputation in the performance of this part. The portrayal, as a whole, unquestionably presents all the charming characteristics with which Mr. JEFFERSON made us acquainted a dozen years ago, but, in considering it more closely, we are obliged to say that its value is to some extent impaired by certain excesses of what might be called over-elaboration, but which appear to us mere intrusive details, of which we certainly have no past recollection. If they were included in the first representations of "Rip Van Winkle," the beauty of the general picture must have made the critical sense more indifferent to them, at that time, than it possibly can be at present, and we are confident that they find very little warrant in the compact version of the drama prepared by Mr. BOUCICAULT, announced as that which Mr. JEFFERSON now produces. For many reasons—the most important being the absence of dramatic elements in the original story—the interest of the play is necessarily made to centre in a single character, and that thus should be brought forward into as distinct and prominent relief as is consistent with its relations toward the surrounding figures is both expected and desired. But further than this the actor should not go, and not even Mr. JEFFERSON'S art can reconcile us to the absolute extinction of the individuality of any other character for the purpose of multiplying the effects of his own. The error is the more to be regretted, since, instead of adding to the interest which follows him, he really decreases it, by magnifying the least amiable qualities of the part and rendering it at times an object of mockery rather than of sympathy. It is in the first act that this blemish is most conspicuous, and especially in the closing scene of that act. Whatever dramatic purpose the play may possess can only be developed by making Rip Van Winkle appear, with all his faults, less blameworthy than his vixenish wife, and by indicating that his vicious habits have been forced upon him by her intolerable temper. But as now represented, the picture is reversed. The prolonged exhibition of Rip's maudlin pranks in the cottage confirms a suspicion, which, at the best, is always latent in the mind of the audience, that Gretchen is the real sufferer and the only genuine object of pity, and that the vagabond husband, in being expelled from his home, receives nothing but what he deserves. This is false in art, Rip being nothing if not more or less a martyr. Or if, on the other hand, he claims and receives commiseration at the expense of his wife and in spite of his mad follies, then it is false in morality. Either way the higher purpose is lost. This unfortunate result seems to be solely owing to Mr. JEFFERSON'S willingness to inordinately prolong the scene on his own account. What he gains by it we cannot perceive, excepting a few thoughtless laughs from the least considerate part of the audience, and these by methods not usually esteemed legitimate in theatres. The colloquies between him and Miss MORANT, as Gretchen, so often fall into the style of repartee best known to negro-minstrelsy, that at times we fancy ourselves listening to interchanges of wit between "end-man" and "middle-man." Of course, under these circumstances, the wife completely loses her identity, her remarks being mere targets for Rip's rejoinders, while Rip himself ceases to be a definite character, and falls to the level of a grinder of exceedingly cheap jokes. We speak plainly upon the subject, because everybody feels, although everybody may not be willing to say, that such expedients are not worthy of Mr. JEFFERSON'S high rank and great abilities. The objection, as we have explained, is not to the circumstance of Rip Van Winkle being made from beginning to end the prominent character, for that is a necessity, but to his being put forward in such a manner as to injure the truthfulness and interfere with the progress of the performance. How properly he may occupy almost undivided attention is shown in the second act, where no word is uttered throughout except by him, and where the illusion is never for a moment dispelled. These considerations apart, Mr. JEFFERSON'S Rip Van Winkle remains what it has always been held to be, one of the most finished and admirable impersonations which the modern stage affords. As to his third act, it is almost literally without a flaw.

The performances of the assisting company demand a few words. The most marked figure, after Rip, is that of Gretchen, his wife, which is interpreted by Miss FANNY MORANT with great ardor and energy in the first act, and with appropriate meekness in the last. The effects are well intended, though based upon a wrong idea of the part. We begin to be terrified at the dramatic inroads of the conventional Lady Macbeth. "No man's pie is free from her ambitious finger." It, is hard enough to endure her in "Macbeth" itself, but of course that will have to be tolerated until some real genius shall arise to teach actresses how the character should be played. But against the intrusion of this conventional horror into every form and class of the drama we do protest. This is a somewhat flagrant case. Here is a wild-tempered Dutch virago, totally untutored, except by rough misfortune, haranguing and disporting herself at times with all the attitudes, tones and whirling gesticulations of high classic tragedy, as it is understood by those who do not understand it at all. A little later the impression is varied by a mixture of the modern Mrs. Haller method, especially to be observed in a certain imposing alms-giving business and in solemn attitudes of prostrate humility. Miss MORANT is a good actress, but she here forgets how useless it is to attempt to force high-strung effects upon a part that does not justify them. The two children of Vedder and Van Winkle are represented in the first act by a couple of children whose brightness and appearance of unaffected grace has gained them much deserved commendation; and, indeed, the brief description of the revels of Hendrick Hudson by the lad, is as pretty an episode as one could wish to see. In the last act, little Meenie, now come to woman's estate, is pleasantly and gracefully played by Miss BLANCHE GRAY. Her young sweetheart, now a sturdy sailor, is confided to Mr. E. NORRIS. Without desiring to be unkind to this gentleman, who seems a thoroughly painstaking actor, we think the time has fairly arrived for asking how long he proposes to offer the public uninterrupted imitations of Mr. EDWIN BOOTH as Romeo. Whatever he appears in, we find before us a shadowy reflection of Mr. BOOTH as Romeo. Toujours perdriz is a bad principle, in theatres as elsewhere. It may be an excellent thing for an aspiring actor to set up for himself a high model, but he ought also to remember that his model may possibly have moments of change. Mr. BOOTH has in his day, we believe, played every known variety of parts, and it is a pity that Mr. NORRIS could never have had the privilege of seeing him in something akin to that of Hendrick Vedder. He might have given us Mr. BOOTH again, which would be a little tedious under the circumstances, but he would not have given us Mr. BOOTH as Romeo. There is no good reason why so expert a mimic should not occasionally diversify his performance by presenting, in his rôle of Hendrick, a photograph of Mr. BOOTH as Othello or as Iago. It might be no more appropriate, but it would have the charm of novelty. The remaining characters are of less importance, and are sufficiently well sustained.

Concerning the scenic effects and the manner in which the drama altogether is put upon the stage, we have but a single suggestion to offer. The masks in the Sleepy Hollow scene are imperfect, and margins of mortal flesh visibly interfere with their ghostly aspect. Otherwise this view, with its weird combinations of precipice and chasm, and its fantastic groupings is striking enough to recall some of the vivid pages of GUSTAVE DORE. The more placid pictures of village scenery are equally expressive and admirable.

FRENCH THEATRE.

A number of clever French artists combined last evening for the purpose of producing "for one night only" at this theatre, the latest Palais Royal drollery, a three-act comedy entitled "Gavaud, Minard and Cie." Further description of its character would be unnecessary than the simple statement that it is one of the most ingenious examples of double, triple, even quadruple complication in action and situation that has proceeded from that magazine of diverting dramatic trifles. The various incidents are of a kind that in the first place we should hardly care to present to American readers, and, in the next, would lose all their amusing qualities when separated from the business and the accessories of the stage. The piece was warmly applauded by a thoroughly good-humored audience, and its success was certainly sufficient to warrant a number of repetitions. Mesdames GAY, BRIOT, VILLIERS, and ROSA, and Messrs. CHAMONIN, GUIGNET, and EDGARD, sustained the principal characters.

MADISON UNIVERSITY.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY.

Hamilton Village—Hard Road to Travel—Sketch of University—Commencement Exercises—Large Attendance—Honorary Degrees—President's Address.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HAMILTON, Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1869.

The rural village of Hamilton, in Madison County, N. Y., lies about thirty miles south of Utica, in the midst of one of the quietest and most beautiful valleys in the State. Its population numbers about 2,500, though how so many people ever got there, in view of the execrable road one has to travel to reach it, passes comprehension. Your correspondent arrived in Utica from New-York at 3:45 A. M. An "extra" left on the Utica, Chenango and Susquehanna Valley Railroad two hours and a half later, and reached Pooleville, 35 miles, at 8 o'clock, where, in company with "six precious souls" and one woman, he was compelled to take a stage, evidently built "before the flood,"—or at least before decent springs were invented—and jolt and bounce in the most soul-convulsing style over four miles of alternate up and down hill to Hamilton—a little trip requiring an hour and a half for its accomplishment. The people of Hamilton are certainly unfortunate in their mode of communication with the outer world, and have only themselves to thank for it, for the road which now passes Pooleville, might have run directly through their much more important town, if they had only subscribed fairly for the stock. But "penny wise and pound foolish," has proved true in their case, as in many others, and their timidity has borne them bitter fruit of disappointment. The Chenango Canal, to be sure, flows stiffly through the village; but canals don't build up towns nowadays—especially "one-horse canals," like the Chenango.

The one "enterprise," the pride and glory of this pent-up world, is Madison University. This venerable institution of learning sprung into being just fifty years ago. At that time thirteen pious and sagacious Baptists, led by Rev. NATHANIEL KENDRICK, D. D., and Rev. DANIEL HASCALL, met in Hamilton, and formed themselves into a society called by the rather formidable name of the "Baptist Education Society of the State of New-York." Thirteen dollars were subscribed upon the spot for beginning this enterprise! A charter was soon afterward obtained from the State for a seminary, having for its object the education of pious young men to the Gospel ministry. By making Hamilton the seat of the new institution the incorporators obtained $6,000 from the citizens, which set the Seminary fairly upon its legs as an educator of young men. At various times the charter was amended, until, in March, 1846, it bloomed into the full "University" proportions it now presents, i. e., having a theological, classical, scientific academic course.

Some gentlemen, eminent not only in the Baptist denomination, but in the great world of letters, have been connected at various times with this institution. Besides the two—KENDRICK and HASCALL—already mentioned, it has numbered in its corps of instructors Rev. BARNAS SEARS, D. D., agent of the Peabody fund, and late President of Brown University; Rev. T. J. CONANT, D. D., the eminent Biblical scholar and translator; Rev. A. C. KENDRICK, D. D., of Rochester University, and J. H. RAYMOND, LL. D., President of Vassar College. Under such men, the University naturally ranked high as an educational institution. In 1850, after a bitter contest as to a proposed removal of the whole concern to Rochester, in which success remained with the Hamilton party, a split occurred, resulting in the withdrawal of most of the Professors, a majority of the trustees, and about half the students, who formed in Rochester the flourishing University which adorns that city. Madison University, of course, suffered considerably in consequence of this defection, but gradually recovered its footing, and has for many years now enjoyed substantial prosperity.

During its fifty years' existence the institution has sent forth 450 theological students, 600 college graduates, 1,000 graduates from the Grammar School, and 300 University students. Of these, 14 have become college presidents, 20 college professors, 60 foreign missionaries, and 1,500 ministers. To this large body of Alumni the fiftieth anniversary of their beloved Alma Mater seemed a fit occasion to testify, in some marked way, their affection. For nearly a year, therefore, preparations have been on foot for making this a great occasion in the history of the University.

The eventful "Jubilee" has at length arrived. From far and near, in cars—as far as they could, and then by stage—in carriages and wagons and on foot, the friends of the institution have flocked in crowds, bringing all their relations with them, apparently to the third and fourth generation. Ancient farmers in ancient wagons, and driving slow and heavy beasts, come pouring in from the regions round about, their cumbrous vehicles overflowing with "womankind;" spruce young men, in light buggies, with their buxom sweethearts beside them, dash collegeward; ministers from city and country, college professors and others interested in education, fill the quiet streets with unwonted, though not indecorous activity; and one and all gradually concentrate upon the "Hill," about a mile from the village, where the substantial, but rather unornamental, University buildings stand. The scene is a curious one, such as, perhaps, can nowhere else be looked upon—this motley gathering of all sorts, sizes and qualities. The buildings consist of three large stone edifices, two of them "whitewashed" to a ghastly hue; the other, and largest, left—in much better taste—in the natural state. Fine trees adorn the ample grounds, and the view from the summit of the hill is exceedingly beautiful.

The Commencement exercises began on Saturday evening with a series of prize declamations by selected members of the Classes of 1869, '70 and '71, the prizes being carefully-selected and valuable books.

On Sunday morning the educational sermon was preached in the Baptist Church by Rev. W. H. SHAILER, D. D., of Portland, Me., from I. Cor., vii., 7. In the afternoon Rev. A. H. BURLINGHAM, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo.—formerly of New-York—preached before the Society for Inquiry. Both discourses evinced deep thought, and gave general satisfaction.

Monday evening the two literary societies of the University, the Aconian and the Adelphian, held their anniversary exercises, Rev. C. W. ANABLE, D. D., of Cambridge, Mass., delivering the oration, and B. F. TAYLOR, A. M., formerly editor, and still a writer for, the Chicago Evening Journal, the poem. The former, on the harmony between true science and revealed religion, was a learned and carefully-written effort, but rather too heavy for the occasion. The poem, on the contrary, was one of the most brilliant performances of that brilliant and versatile writer, full of sharp things, and telling hits and noble imagery.

Tuesday morning occurred the anniversary of the Theological Department. But four young men were graduated, and the best that can be said of their addresses is that they were not above the average. Professor ARNOLD's address to the class was replete with solid instruction for the fledgling ministers.

The commencement of the Literary and Scientific Departments took place at 12:30, immediately following the other, the audience remaining to the end. Ten young gentlemen enlightened and entertained their patient hearers with the usual commencement platitudes. It is a pity that the instructors of these "ingenious youths" do not limit them as to time. When ten or so are to speak, and each occupies twenty to thirty minutes, the exercises become decidedly "stale, flat and unprofitable."

In accordance with time-honored custom, "honorary degrees" were conferred with free hand, the following gentlemen being dignified with a "handle to their names:" Ph. D.—Rev. W. C. Richards, of Pittsfield, Mass.; D. D.—Rev. B. F. Bronson, Southbridge, Mass.; E. C. Lord, Missionary to China; C. Sawyer, Bedford, N. Y.; W. K. King, Oswego, N. Y.; S. S. Parker, Providence, R. I., and A. Cleghorn, Ottawa, Ill. LL.D.—Rev. J. C. Burroughs, D. D., President of Chicago University. Honorary A. M.—Revs. T. E. Jones, South Wales, Great Britain, and S. W. Culver, Holland Patent, N. Y.

The address of President DODGE, like that of Dr. ARNOLD, was impressive, full of instruction and kind words to the young men just on the threshold of the real, work-a-day life of the world.

BURLINGTON UNIVERSITY.

Commencement Week—Reception of General Sheridan—Alumni Day—The Death of Mr. Raymond—Exercises and Addresses.

From Our Special Correspondent.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1869.

Our annual pilgrimage to this venerable seat of learning was made over the New-Haven Steamboat and the Connecticut River and Vermont Central lines of railway. Although the connections are not close, this route affords a pleasant variety to the tourist, and is one of the most delightful midsummer journeys which one can take. By it you survey almost the whole length of the Connecticut River Valley, one of the most varied and beautiful to be found, and at the same time one of the most comfortable sections of country to live in, as the prosperous condition of its numerous towns, villages and hamlets proves.

BACCALAUREATE DISCOURSE.

Reaching here this morning we found the exercises of the Commencement Week were in progress. They began with the Baccalaureate Discourse, delivered on Saturday afternoon by President JAMES B. ANGELL. The Scriptures were read by Rev. G. B. SAFFORD, pastor of the Congregational Church, in whose edifice all the public College exercises are held.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Professor TORREY. In opening his discourse the President declared the function of the scholar consisted in learning, applying and commending truth, and that the groundwork of this function is the ardent and earnest love of truth. He illustrated this position in respect to the three great classes of truth—intellectual, moral and spiritual. Two classes of minds do not admit this principle—those who think the scholar's vocation only concerns intellectual truth, and those who think that as truth is one, if they pursue the intellectual, they will thereby attain the spiritual. The scholar's vocation is the pursuit of all truth. Antagonisms arise from the love and pursuit of different kinds and departments of truth by different individuals. Hence the divisions between the votaries of science and the expounders of revelation, both of whom may be under the necessity of restating their views.

The address closed with a pertinent and feeling address in application of these thoughts to the Graduating Class.

The exercises closed with the singing of an appropriate hymn, written by Mr. FERGUSON, a youthful member of the Graduating Class.

SOCIETY OF INQUIRY.

The anniversary of the Society of Religious Inquiry of the University was held in the evening, and attracted a large audience. After prayer by Rev. Mr. DANA, of Norwich, Conn., the annual address was delivered by Rev. WM. F. WARREN, D. D., of the Boston Theological Seminary. The speaker's theme was: "The great issue between Christianity and a Christian Theism." The speaker declared that the issue was no longer Andover against Channing, Armenianism against Calvinism, but Christ against Anti-Christ. He described the various phases of Theism as a Christless Theism represented in Judaism, then Mohammedanism; then the Deism of the eighteenth century and the Pantheism of the nineteenth. Now, in Germany, England and this country, it is neither Atheism nor Pantheism, but the Deism of the last century placed upon the basis of a mighty and world-wide movement of unbelief. The speaker traced the compatability of Theism and Christianity through all the various facts and doctrines which are disputed in the Christian world, and affirmed, in closing, that the doctrines of Christianity solve the great problems of Theism; that the Gospel of Christ is a miracle of harmony, and that a true belief in God must be connected with faith in Christ.

RECEPTION OF GENERAL SHERIDAN.

Major-General PHIL. SHERIDAN being in Burlington on a visit, was very handsomely received by the University on Monday morning. Accompanied by Colonel CANNON and Colonel CROSBY, of his staff, and General RICHARD ARNOLD, U. S. A., commanding at Plattsburg, General SHERIDAN drove to the University grounds. He was heartily received by the students, and welcomed in an adulatory address by President ANGELL, to which he briefly responded.

THE PHI BETA KAPPA SOCIETY.

At the business meeting on Tuesday morning, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—G. G. BENEDICT.
Vice-President—J. W. HICKOK.
Register—J. E. GOODRICH.
Corresponding Secretary—Professor M. H. BUCKHAM.
Treasurer—E. S. PECK.

Rev. Dr. PARK, of Andover, Mass., was appointed orator, and Hon. W. M. EVARTS, of New-York, his substitute for the next anniversary.

The anniversary of the Society was celebrated on Tuesday afternoon. The Chaplain of the Society, Rev. A. CASSWELL, LL. D., President of Brown University, offered prayer.

Professor LEWIS DIMAN, of Brown University, delivered the annual address on "The Method of Academic Culture." The address was an able discussion of the points of disagreement between the friends of the utilitarian and the thorough systems of college education. The speaker argued that from the admissions of its friends, the former method could not furnish such an education as the College should give—and the College should be in advance of a Polytechnic school. The address was of an elevated and class tone.

THE ALUMNI DAY.

The Alumni met this morning and reflected their former officers, and also appointed a Committee to prepare a mural tablet, inscribed with the names of those sons of the University who fell during the civil war.

The anniversary was held in the large stone church in College-street, and was largely attended.

The annual address was delivered by WINSLOW C. WATSON, Jr., of Keesville, N. Y. His subject was "The Hour and the Man." The speaker, in a clear and forcible manner, enforced the idea that there was some peculiar sphere of activity for which every man was fitted, and that he should wisely search and ascertain what this is, and then earnestly pursue that as his vocation. The powers of many are entirely useless because misdirected, and their influence is often pernicious, when in the right place they might be a blessing. The speaker closed by enforcing the idea that success only comes by labor, and is the fruit of love for the employment. Let the man be fitted for the work and God will bring him the hour.

The poem was read by Rev. GEO. J. BARD, of Dumbarton, N. H.

The Alumni dinner was spread in their best style by mine hosts in the spacious dining hall of the American Hotel. A new feature was introduced by the presence of a large number of ladies who enlivened the feast. After the removal of the cloth L. B. INGLESBY, Esq., the President of the Association, called upon President ANGELL, who responded in a pleasant way as to the march stolen upon the corporation by securing the addition of their fair guests. The strength of a college, he was persuaded, lies in the affections of its sons, and this College is richer in her graduates of sixty years, than she would be had she an endowment of $1,000,000. With the affections of the daughters, she will be richer still.

P. T. WASHBURN, Esq., the Republican candidate for the Governorship of the State, followed, expressing his satisfaction with the guardianship exercised by the State, and hoping that the Alumni and Alumnæ would all become deeply interested in her prosperity.

The President alluded to the recent death of Hon. HENRY J. RAYMOND, a son of the University, and editor of the NEW-YORK TIMES, and called upon Hon. CHARLES BENEDICT, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to express the views of the Association.

Judge BENEDICT remarked that he mourned for Mr. RAYMOND as a son of the University and his best friend. While others regretted the loss of a statesman, a politician, or a journalist, he was afflicted for his friend. The first recollection he had of Mr. RAYMOND was when he delivered his Master's Oration, in which he boldly attacked a position taken by the editor of the Washington Globe, "that that Government is the best which governs least." Since that time he had been a member of his family, had known him intimately, been his professional counsel, had crossed the ocean with him, and was prepared to speak of his character.

His integrity was without blemish. As sole controller of the editorial department of the TIMES, he was free from combinations and cliques. Its columns were never used with his knowledge to promote private ends or corrupt measures.

His freedom from vindictiveness was marked. He never wrote a line dictated by malice, and, in this respect, he was a model man, whose example deserves to be followed.

He was a man of courage. The speaker would not repeat the position Mr. RAYMOND took in the Baltimore Convention, because it was familiar to all. In Congress he was bold. He once used an expression in debate which the speaker thought imprudent, as it exposed him to a severe castigation at the hands of THAD. STEVENS. A few days after he repeated it, and when expostulated with, he said "he did it to see if THAD. would get mad again." He always voted upon his own convictions of right, and took no cue from others.

His generosity toward those who were working upward was remarkable. He knew one case of a respectable man embarrassed in his circumstances who applied to him to be employed to write an article, when Mr. RAYMOND was upon the Courier & Enquirer. No price was fixed, but, after the article was written, Mr. RAYMOND named $40, which the gentleman gladly accepted. Mr. RAYMOND gave him an order, and he was paid $60, which relieved him. Many similar cases might be named. Many of the strangers at his funeral were of this class of persons. A stranger met the speaker the other day, and said he had lost his best friend. His mind was full of projects to promote the prosperity of his paper, and had he lived ten years longer, he would have made it a marvel of journalism. But his work was done, and now on every hand we hear spoken words of commendation, thankfulness and hope. His affection for this college was deep, earnest and abiding. He passed a whole night recently in telling a friend stories of his college life. He came here a poor boy, was obliged to take a steerage passage in order to get here, and died an honor to the University.

A poem written by J. S. D. TAYLOR, Esq., of St. Albans, welcoming the ladies to the festival, was read by Rev. Mr. LANPHIER. Addresses were also made by Prof. J. C. DRAPER, College of the City of New-York; Hon. C. W. WILLARD, United States Congress; Mr. ROBERTS, of Canada, and Prof. KENT, of Michigan University.

The exercises closed by singing "Old Hundred."

THE MONOPOLY IN COAL

Meeting in Buffalo—Companies to Resume Work—Prices to Recede.

From the Buffalo Courier, Aug. 4.

Quite a large number of highly respectable citizens opposed to the present high price of coal met last night at Mechanics' Hall, but, for want of sufficient room, adjourned to the old Courthouse, where the meeting was called to order by WM. B. GATCHELL, and on his motion MR. THOS. J. DUDLEY was chosen Chairman and THOS. S. KING Secretary.

At the conclusion of the several addresses, Mr. GATCHELL offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of three, consisting of THOS. J. DUDLEY, A. L. GRIFFIN and A. G. STEVENS, be appointed to propose a plan of organization, to report at a meeting to be held at this place on Wednesday evening, Aug. 4, 1869, and if not prepared to report at that time, notice shall be published in the evening papers to that effect, in which case the meeting shall be held Friday evening, Aug. 6, at this place.

From the Utica Observer, Aug. 4.

The Philadelphia North American gives a rumor, current in Philadelphia, that the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company will shortly follow the Pennsylvania Coal Company in resuming work at their mines in the anthracite region, and that by the end of this week the entire coal region of the State will be again actively at work.

From the Richmond Whig, Aug. 4.

There is a strong probability that the price of anthracite coal will recede from present figures rather than advance, with the approach of Autumn. The speculators and colliers who imagined that they could control the trade to suit their own grasping designs, have discovered that "they have overdone the thing," and provoked the repeal of the duty on foreign coal. We learn from the Philadelphia North American that "in the Schuylkill region all parties seem to be thoroughly aware of the mischief that has been done and of the danger threatening, and they are working with zeal and effect to rush their coal to market in immense quantities. They have already done wonders in making up lost ground.

It is estimated that before the end of August the increase in the supply will equal at least 600,000 tons over the supply of last year for the same period. All the colliories are now at work in the different coal regions, except two companies in the Scranton region.

It is recently stated that the Clover Hill Coal Company had decided to offer the product of their mines at lower rates than it has ever been sold at heretofore, but the official announcement has not yet appeared. Before another year has passed away we hope that the city will be abundantly supplied with cannel coal from the Kanawha mines.

The Will of the Late Ex-Governor Crapo, of Michigan.

Governor CRAPO's will has been deposited with the Judge of Probate at Detroit. His estate consists of a large lumber business at Saginaw, Flint and Detroit, many acres of farming lands in Genesee County, a large amount of pine land in twenty-nine counties of Michigan; the total probably being $1,000,000. The will makes ample provision for his widow, and then requests that the estate may be left undivided, each of his eight children having one-ninth interest, and the other ninth being divided among certain of his grand children. His son, WILLIAM CRAPO, of New-Bedford, is appointed administrator, and requested to take charge of the business, and will do so, moving to Flint for that purpose.

BISHOP VS. RECTOR.

The Chicago Case—Decision of the Judge of the Supreme Court on the Motion to Dissolve Mr. Cheney's Injunction Against the Ecclesiastical Court—The Injunction Sustained.

Judge JAMESON, of the Supreme Court in Chicago, rendered his decision in the case—virtually—of Bishop WHITEHOUSE against Rev. Mr. CHENEY, on Tuesday, in which he sustained the injunction of the latter against the Ecclesiastical Court. The document is a valuable one, and we accordingly give its main points below:

Before commencing, I may state that considerable question has arisen in the case, and furnished a great deal of confusion in the public mind in regard to the right of a temporal or civil Court to interfere at all in a case like this, where an ecclesiastical tribunal is claiming to act. The civil Courts disclaim, and I here disclaim, any power or any desire to interfere with the action of a spiritual Court proceeding within and according to its canons, the laws and regulations of the Church itself. The old maxim embodied in the twenty-fourth statute of HENRY VIII., "that causes spiritual ought to be tried by Judges of the spirituality, and causes temporal ought to be judged by temporal Judges," is admitted in its full force in civil Courts. And it is because there is here a temporal cause, a right of property, a civil right, threatened, or upon the bill a case is made of a civil right threatened by the action of an Ecclesiastical Court, that this Court attempts to intervene itself to protect what is acknowledged to be within the jurisdiction of a temporal court—a temporal right. Where an ecclesiastical tribunal is engaged in the trial of an offender under an act of discipline, under the rules and canons of the Church, if it proceed according to those canons a civil court has no right to interfere. If it transgress its own rules and regulations, and if the effect of that transgression be to seriously injure the temporal rights of the party accused, the civil courts have the right, and it is their duty to interfere. What, then, is the wrong in this case? Stated briefly, the respondents here are charged with sitting, or attempting to act as an Ecclesiastical Court, and to try Rev. CHARLES E. CHENEY, and that they are proceeding outside of and in violation of their rules. An Ecclesiastical Court in this country is nothing more than a mere voluntary association of individuals. Not to state the fact invidiously, it is perfectly true that an ecclesiastical tribunal, or a church association, is no more in the eye of the law than is an association for any temporal purpose, than a base ball club, a lyceum, or an organization for the construction and operation of a railroad, and the courts possess the right to interfere in these cases, upon a violation of the contract or stipulation, which constitutes the association. It is charged here, I say, by Rev. CHARLES E. CHENEY, that this tribunal, or so-called tribunal, is proceeding to try him in violation of its own canons and ordinances. If that be so, and the effect be such as the law recognizes as authorizing this Court to interfere, it is the duty of this Court to do so.

Several objections have been raised by the complainant in this case against the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Court, and I may state summarily, in commencing, that every one of the objections raised by Mr. CHENEY, every one of them, is in my judgment sound, and should have been sustained by the Court—a statement that, perhaps, could not be made in a civil tribunal in one case in a thousand.

The first objection raised was, that the Bishop who instituted the proceeding in this case, admitted it was in violation of the canon of the Church; that the commission, as issued by him, upon its face, was a violation of the canon of the Church, and gave no jurisdiction to the presenters to inquire into the offence, or to the Court to try it. Canon 20, of the Diocese of Illinois, provides that the Bishop may institute proceedings for the trial of offences upon information given to him from three sources—from a majority of the vestry of the church, from three presbyters of the church, or from public rumor. It has been held by this Court, in the Hager case—and, I think, with perfect justness—that this canon and ordinance of the Church presents and affords an exclusive rule for the Bishop; that he had no right to proceed outside of the canon, and should have proceeded on one of the three grounds mentioned. It does not purport, on its face, to proceed upon one of the three grounds mentioned, but purports to proceed upon "credible information." The Bishop in his commission to the presenters says: "Being credibly informed that Rev. CHARLES E. CHENEY has," so and so, "I appoint you to make an inquisition and a presentment, if the case requires it." The Court holds—this being the very foundation of the whole proceeding, the foundation of the court—unless the Bishop brings himself within the provision of the canon, he has no right to proceed at all—any more than the first four men who come together in the street and say, "Here, CHARLES E. CHENEY has been guilty of an offence against his Church; we are a court, and we will try him."

I shall not go at length into the reasons for this opinion, but I have no doubt at all that this is restrictive upon the Bishop. If he had no right under any such commission to appoint presenters, of course the presenters had no right to act—coming together, these five men, and assuming to act as a court. I think there was there also a violation of the canons. The canon requires that the Bishop shall select eight persons out of whom the accused shall have the right to select five, and, as I construe the canon, and as it can alone be construed, I believe the party has a right, from the Bishop, to a notice of twenty days in which to make this selection of five persons to try him. Then also, according to the canon, there is required from the Bishop a notice of thirty days of the trial. This also constitutes a jurisdictional fact. No court can be constituted under this canon unless it be constituted in the way provided by the canons. The fact is that only seventeen days, even with the extension of time that was voluntarily permitted by the Bishop, was allowed Mr. CHENEY in which to select these parties. It is true that there is some difference of opinion among counsel in regard to the true construction of these canons; that is the allowance of twenty days for the appearance, the selection of the court, and the thirty days notice of the trial, but in my judgment it is impossible that these canons can be construed so as to stand at all, except with that one construction; and I may say that that construction is favored and strengthened by the fact that on the trial of a bishop under the canons of the Church precisely that course is taken. There is first the citation to form the court, and the court having been formed, there is then a further citation to appear and be tried. The canons of a great many of the dioceses are also express upon that same point. The court coming together, it is alleged by the bill that it had been selected by the Bishop, organized by the Bishop, to convict; that the Bishop was prejudiced and biased against the defendant, and that he had threatened, or had intimated to the complainant that in case of his contumacy of his offence being brought before the Court for trial, there could be but one result, namely, deposition; that he went on, as the bill states, also to intimate that there could be but one result, for the reason that in the Diocese of Illinois no one would be competent to sit upon that court at all as a judge or a trier who had signed a certain protest in which was involved—upon which also was the name of Mr. CHENEY, and the right to sign which was a part of the offence in this case—at issue in this case. It was claimed for these reasons, on the trial, that there should not be allowed to the accused the right of challenge of the Court, a right to ask the different members of the Court whether they had or had not expressed an opinion, the bill stating "that upon information and belief, one of the members, at least, had expressed an opinion of the guilt of the accused." This right of challenge was overruled, and, I may say here, that according to the best legal authorities of the Church itself, it was wrongly, and I might say even was oppressively overruled. There is probably not in the world a tribunal—certainly no civil tribunal—and I doubt if there ever was before a court Christian that overruled summarily an objection of that kind. If a court be thus constituted, the right of challenge is a common right that cannot be renounced, that cannot be taken away. That is also one of the objections that should have been sustained by the Court; that is, there should be the right of challenge or inquiry, at all events, to ascertain whether an opinion had been expressed or not.

Another objection, also, that was raised by the accused, was that the presentment—the paper which stands in an ecclesiastical trial the same as an indictment stands in a trial at common law—namely, the specification in writing of the offences for which a party is to appear and stand his trial—was insufficient. The Court had no right to proceed to try him upon any such presentment. This, also, was overruled. Now, what was the objection? The objection was that the offence charged was with having omitted the word "regenerate" or the word "regeneration," in the office of infant baptism, on divers occasions within the last two years or within the last six months, in one or two of the counts not specifying day or place, or circumstance, or name of persons who were to be called upon as witnesses against the accused.

Now, I must express my astonishment that a Court should have proceeded to overrule an objection of that kind. Even Mr. HOFFMAN, who is the great author upon the law of the Church in this country, says that a presentment or indictment in that form is bad according to all systems of law—the civil law, the common law, military law, canon law and ecclesiastical law; and I may add that it is abhorrent also to every principle of common sense. Mr. HOFFMAN also characterizes such a presentment as that as absurdly illegal.

Now, some of these objections, if not all, were objections that went to the very foundation of the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed; went to the very jurisdiction of the Court over the subject matter; and if wrongfully overruled, the Court, of course, was proceeding outside of its canons, and had no authority so to do. This is the wrong complained of on the part of the Ecclesiastical Court.

Now arises a very important question, whether the wrong complained of is such as a Court of Chancery has jurisdiction to inquire into and to redress. To state in a few words my views upon that point, the counsel here must show two circumstances to exist, and to coexist, in order to justify the taking of jurisdiction by this Court. There must be, as the inevitable, natural or proper result of this action of the Ecclesiastical Court, an injury to the civil rights of Mr. CHENEY, or to his rights of property, and the injury must be such as the law accounts to be irreparable in its nature. Was it an inevitable consequence that there would be an injury committed to the property rights of the complainant if the Court were allowed to proceed?

The bill sets up that Mr. CHENEY has for many years been a presbyter of Christ Church, in this city, connected with the Diocese of Illinois; that he was educated for the business and pursuit of a pastor of the Episcopal Church; that he is in the receipt of his salary of $4,500 a year, as such pastor, and also of emoluments in the shape of a parsonage, rent free, from the parish.

Now, what would be the consequence of the Court, in this instance, proceeding to trial? It is said that the consequence would not necessarily be that the defendant would be deposed, or even suspended from the ministry—there has been no sentence in the case as yet. In brief, my view of that point is this: A Court proceeding in violation of its own canons, outside of its own jurisdiction, must be presumed to intend all that may befall in the prosecution of the case, even the worst that may befall. They must be presumed to intend, so far as the question at issue is concerned, the deposition of this party, because they put him, without right, to the risk of deposition. And the bill, I may say, goes further, and states that the Bishop has made a threat, or what has been taken and understood to be an authority, that there shall be deposition in this case, and that the question shall be carried until deposition be arrived at. It is true, the Bishop, in his affidavits, denies this, but it is a most significant fact that the respondents, who are the only defendants to the bill, in their answer, do not deny it. They make no answer whatever to that allegation of the bill, and, so far as these respondents are concerned, I am entitled to consider it as not denying. Having, as I say, no right to proceed at all, the presumption of law is that they intend—for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to a Court to put a stop to their illegal proceedings—that they intend that which may befall, all that may befall in the case, the natural consequences, under the canons of the Church.

If that be admitted, the only remaining question is, whether there is such a damage to the civil and property rights of this complainant, as that a court has a right to intervene and protect him from the injury, and put a stop to the action of the Court. The injury must be irreparable. What is an irreparable injury in the legal sense of the term? A man may have five different estates, worth $100,000 apiece, except the fifth, which may be worth but $2,000, and he has a perfect right under the law to go into Court and allege a threatened irreparable injury to that fifth, although his property as a whole may be very far from threatened, or from an injury such as to render him a bankrupt. The irreparable injury is to be confined with respect to that to which the injury is threatened, and may be, in amount, small. An irreparable injury is one that threatens to destroy that in the estate or in the thing or subject in question, whether it be an heirloom or whether it be an estate in land. I say, that could destroy that in the estate which is of pecuniary value to the owner. If the injury be such as to threaten to destroy that interest in its substantial value, it is to that interest an irreparable injury.

An irreparable injury must be either directly or indirectly. If the direct and immediate consequence of the injury be to destroy the estate or interest it is directly irreparable. If it be such that the injury, although a court of law would recognize its existence, it could not arrive at an accurate rule of damages, or a jury arrive at the accurate measure of damages, it is then indirectly irreparable and the law will step in and prevent injury.

Now I have said that the right here in question is the right of Mr. CHENEY to be a minister of the Gospel in the Episcopal Church—the right to continue in his pursuit as pastor of Christ Church and in receipt of the salary and emoluments of that position. It is no pecuniary injury that a man shall be cut off even from the pastorate of a church with which he is at present connected, even supposing he can, if cut off from this church, go abroad and connect himself with some other church.

But the question here is not so simple as that. Under the canons of the Episcopal Church, if this Court proceed to depose, or even indefinitely to suspend, the complainant, he is cut off absolutely from all the churches of the entire communication in the land. He cannot, in any Episcopal church, either in this country or in England, probably, officiate as a pastor. His career and pursuit, for which, as the bill states, he is specially adapted by education and by inclination, is at once blasted. It is, so far as his temporal rights are concerned, very much as though his arms were clipped off by the order and direction of this Court; or as though his frame were paralyzed, and that skill by which he had been enabled to earn a living for himself and his family, were at once annihilated. I am required to go to the extent of holding that the respondents, acting in violation of their own canons—if the result of their proceeding would be, or might be, the deposition of this minister—would commit that which they threaten by the very act of proceeding to try him, with that risk in advance of him. I say that they are threatening that which is an irreparable injury to his temporal rights and to his pecuniary interests. It has been holden in several cases that the function and business of a minister of the Gospel or of a lawyer, is a thing—it is a valuable thing independently of the fees and emoluments that may befall, and I understand that to be distinctly the substance of two decisions in the fourth of Wallace's United States Reports that went up from the State of Missouri, one of which involved the right of a minister of the Gospel to preach, and the other of a lawyer to practice his profession without taking a certain oath that had been prescribed by the Legislature of Missouri, and which they could not take, with respect to their conduct during the war. There is a case also cited in the Alabama reports—the volume has escaped me, but I will state it in my opinion at large—going to the same effect.

Now, it may be said, and will be said, and was said upon the argument, that no injury can be in the legal sense irreparable where the law itself punishes, and when a court of law, in contradistinction to a Court of Chancery, furnishes an adequate remedy for that wrong. It is true, and it is claimed here that in case of deposition Mr. CHENEY, being under engagement by Christ Church parish to preach for them, if wrongfully deposed, would have his action in assumpsit to recover against the parish the balance of his salary, and it is undoubtedly true that he might; or, should he choose, he could one out a writ of mandamus, and, under the same circumstances and conditions, procure his restoration to his position as minister of Christ Church. But how inadequate a remedy of that kind! Even the writ of mandamus could not undo the sentence of the tribunal in this case. Mr. CHENEY, the complainant here, would be all the time a deposed minister of the Episcopal Church. His congregation, I cannot suppose, would follow him in his course. They must and they would, in contemplation of law, obey and follow their Bishop. Although Mr. CHENEY might be restored for the balance of the term, perhaps for a part of the year for which they had engaged him, and he might, in an action at law, recover his salary for the balance of the year—still he would not be the pastor, in any practical sense, of that church. His church would not hear him. They could not hear him. There is not an Episcopal Church in the land that could hear him without subjecting themselves to the imputation of an offence for which they would be liable to be tried, or subjected to spiritual censure by the Bishop. The consequence is that there is absolutely no sufficient remedy at law when the term has expired for which he is engaged. Where is his pursuit, his career, his business as a minister of the Gospel? He is driven forth like Cain, with a mark upon his forehead, and it is the duty of all good Churchmen to shun him as they would the evil one himself.

Now, injury of this kind is very far from being a slight injury to the temporal interests or rights of property of the party, if I am correct in supposing that there is such a thing as value in the right to pursue one's calling as minister of the Gospel. Without going into other questions which have been raised in this case, I am prepared to rest my judgment on this—of course, understanding very well the fallibility of my own judgment and that I may be in error. It is my duty, however—it has been made my duty, without my own choice, I may say—to intervene in this case. The rules under which I do so have been laid down long years ago by the sages of the law. This is a fearful case. It is a case in which I would gladly avoid doing my duty. It is my pleasure to be a vestryman of the Episcopal Church myself, and to attend upon the ministrations of that Church, and of course it is particularly painful to me to intervene here between a Bishop and a clergyman of that Church. Whatever the consequences, however, it is not my duty to shrink from them and I do not. The result is that this tribunal ought not to proceed. I have gone thus far into my views of the irregularities under the canons of the Church at this time in this extempore manner, in order that if the advisers of the Episcopal authorities in this case should think there is any weight in my opinion in point, or in case another trial be instituted, some of the objections raised, and which ought to have been sustained, shall be obviated in their future action. It cannot be proper for a court, declining to be examined as to whether it has committed itself as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, to go on and try him without giving him any note of warning, in advance, of what he is charged with—the offence, the time and place, and circumstances, and I cannot but express my astonishment that four or five gentlemen of intelligence could be found in this diocese who would undertake to proceed in that way. Not a civil tribunal in the land; not a case in the country since the time of SCROGGS and JEFFREYS, can be found in which injustice so great has been attempted. This is my judgment. The injunction therefore is sustained.

After consultation, it was decided between counsel for the complainant and respondents that whatever verbal alterations are desirable in the bill be made, and the case be carried before the Supreme Court at the September term.

CHICAGO, Ill., Thursday, Aug. 5.

The Ecclesiastical Court met to-day. A long protest against the action of Judge JAMESON was presented and read. The Court then adjourned until September.

The Committee, appointed by the State Temperance Committee of this State, to prepare an address to the voters, have just performed that duty. They do not ask for a general prohibitory law, as it would not be sustained by the popular verdict, but that where prohibition is desired by a majority of the legal voters, they may be permitted to try it. The friends of temperance are advised to canvass in their respective districts for the purpose of procuring proper candidates for the Legislature.

THE BOSTON MURDER.

Further Particulars—Sketch of Major White, the Murderer—His Appearance in Court.

The Boston papers state that Major WHITE, the murderer of Mrs. HOBBS, at her house in that city on Tuesday evening, in the presence of her family, as stated in the TIMES of yesterday, is a Canadian, about 30 years of age, and came to Boston in 1865 and entered the law office of B. S.

AN ILLINOIS FARMER.

John T. Alexander, the Cattle King—His Personnel, Possessions, &c.

From the Geneseo (Ill.) Republic.

We frequently see accounts in the papers of men who are noted for their genius, talents, and whatever they may have accomplished above the average of men generally. We see notices of miners and farmers in California, in Texas, and in other States, who have done big things. We see notices of men who have grown rich in manufacturing and real estate speculations in the East and elsewhere. Scarce a paper that does not puff somebody for some wonderful feat in some direction.

We do not recollect to have seen any notice in the papers of one of the greatest men the country has produced. We mean JOHN T. ALEXANDER, of Morgan County, who commenced business for himself with little capital or other advantages above the average of men generally. He is a plain, homespun farmer—tall, good looking, free and easy in manners, without the least particle of style in words or acts.

It is interesting to watch the movements of such a man at Springfield or Chicago, among the pepinjays and self-constituted leaders of society who are greatly elevated in their own conceit. Mr. ALEXANDER has been farming in Illinois a good many years, and has been very successful. His farms now comprise about 30,000 acres, mostly under improvement. This is about one township and a half, about nine miles square, and all good land. He has now 5,000 acres of growing corn, and from 1,500 to 2,000 head of cattle. He is now feeding about 10,000 head of cattle, and buys and ships East from Chicago from 1,000 to 2,000 head each week. He has risen to this great prominence by his own talents, energy and integrity. His business each and every year amounts to millions of dollars, and is entirely legitimate, adding to his own wealth and the common welfare of the State.

We may, at some other time, give, in more detail, a history of Mr. ALEXANDER and his operations—not that he needs any such notice, but as an example to the young to go and do likewise, instead of going into stores and offices to avoid soiling their fingers, with the notion that farming is not so genteel and profitable.

We may do so for another reason, and that is the fact that the young, as well as the older people, nowadays, get their notion of things generally from the newspapers—the papers, for some reason or other—perhaps the force of circumstances more than anything else—have much to say of manufacturers, lawyers, preachers, bankers, and other professional and trafficking characters, but very little or nothing of farmers. We think it profitable to present, as an offset to about ten thousand politicians and other characters who occupy the columns of news, one such man as JOHN T. ALEXANDER.

The Indiana Coal Measures—Interesting Investigations.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 26.

Dr. EDWARD T. COX, State Geologist, returned on Saturday night from an expedition to the western portion of the State, where he has been engaged for nearly three weeks in the prosecution of his official labors. This time has been spent in Clay, Owen, Vigo and Parke Counties, and the discoveries have been highly important. He has succeeded in tracing the belt of block coal through these counties, beginning in the southwestern part of Owen County, and extending in a direction rather west of north through Clay, Vigo and Parke Counties. The belt is about six miles in width, Brazil and Rockville being on the western margin of the belt. Throughout this distance this coal is found in good beds, ranging from three to five feet in thickness. On his next trip he expects to trace the same belt through Fountain and Warren and the same coal through Montgomery and Tippecanoe Counties. All of this is very accessible, and much of it can be readily reached by "drifts" into the hillside.

Near the middle of Clay County a fine deposit of bog iron ore was found in quantities sufficient to run a furnace, and in most of the ravines through the district there are large quantities of kidney ore, in no place sufficient to support a furnace, but all of which can be made available. He also came across a considerable amount of banded ore—carbonate of iron—in Parke County. He has not yet tested its quality so as to be satisfied as to its richness, but is rather inclined to the opinion that it may contain iron enough to justify its being used as an ore. These iron deposits he expects to trace into Greene County, and his next trip after investigating the coal measures of Fountain and Warren Counties will be extended to the neighborhood of Bloomfield, Greene County, for that purpose.

Besides the block coal, which is so valuable on account of its being available for smelting iron without coking, beds of bituminous caking coals were found throughout the section. In veins ranging from five to eight feet in thickness, which will make excellent fuel. The difference between this and the block coal is that the latter does not melt and run, but keeps its original shape under intense heat, thereby making it possible to keep up a strong draft through it, which cannot be done with the caking coal. The latter has its value, however, for fuel, and is very accessible by means of drifts or shallow shafts.

Dr. COX is satisfied that there is a very bright future in store for Indiana as a manufacturing State; that it will not be long until the entire western portion of the State will be covered over with furnaces, and that we shall stand second to Pennsylvania only in manufactures. The value of this block coal, which is being found in such large quantities, can scarcely be over-estimated, as it must so very greatly lessen the cost of manufacturing iron. The only other place where it is found is in the Chenango Valley, in Pennsylvania, and there only in limited quantities. The people throughout the section of the State he visited are wild with excitement, and take great interest in the investigations which are being made. Such being the case, the Doctor found everybody ready to lend him all the assistance he could desire. Eastern capitalists are also becoming more and more interested. They are pursuing their investigations quietly, but none the less actively, and some of our own men may wake up to the importance of this enterprise, to find that Eastern men are already ahead of them. He found some men engaged in prospecting for a railroad to run directly through this region, and they were anxious to secure the locate the coal beds, and they might locate the railroad.

Fine specimens of freestone, of excellent quality for building purposes, were found throughout the section surveyed.

Dr. Cox brought home with him two boxes filled with specimens of the coals and ores found, which he will proceed at once to thoroughly test. After a week spent in this way, he will start upon his next trip.

A Landlord Swindled Out of a Hotel, and Ruined.

From the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette, July 29.

One of the completest swindles ever known in this country was brought to view at Justice PETER'S office yesterday morning, when the swindler was hauled up for examination.

About the 1st of May, one LOUIS ASKNOTT, who resides on a farm between Rock Island and Hampton, stopped at the Howard House in Le Claire, and, being a man of respectable appearance and smooth address, soon became well acquainted with the landlord, ERASTUS DOWNEY. Hotel business was not good in Le Claire at that date, and Mr. DOWNEY told his guest as much, and wished he was out of it. ASKNOTT manifested great interest in the matter, condoled with the landlord, and went his way. He returned at times, however, with his condolence, and at last offered to relieve the landlord of his dull business perplexity, proffering a price for the hotel which was too profitable to be lost by the now eager landlord. So on the 25th of May the Howard House was sold to ASKNOTT, with its contents, the price being $5,000 for the hotel and $1,500 for the furniture. The consideration actually passed was embraced in a farm of 160 acres or so in Mercer County, Ill., and nineteen notes, with interest, payable now and then —one in thirty days. So the property was deeded to ASKNOTT on the 25th of May, and it was not long before the deeds were transferred to an innocent party named GOULD.

One day DOWNEY went over to Mercer County to look at this farm. He discovered the place where it ought to be, but every foot of its earth was hid from his view by water, and, to his consternation, he learned that that splendid farm of his was invisible to mortal eyes nearly the whole year round. It was a splendid field for raising for the French markets, and probably for cat-fish culture. It was a pretty substitute for a hotel. Then DOWNEY became alarmed about his notes. And well he might, for upon investigation he found they were worth just as much as the paper on which they were written, and no more. ASKNOTT had ruined him.

Lawyers were consulted in this city. For a good reason the arrest of ASKNOTT on a requisition was not thought best. Subsequently the case was put in the hands of Marshal KAUFMANN. In due time the Marshal had business in Illinois, and made the acquaintance of ASKNOTT —in fact he met him several times by pure accident, of course, and where his Marshalship was unknown.

Nobody knows how it happened, but at a very early hour yesterday morning ASKNOTT came to Davenport and fell in with the Marshal. He was much astonished to find himself a prisoner, charged with obtaining money under false pretences, and still more astonished when, after a brief walk, he discovered that he was at the jail, and immensely astounded when he was told to "go in."

At 9 o'clock ASKNOTT was taken before Justice PETERS for examination, Messrs. MARTIN CHASE and DRURY appearing for the prosecution. He waived the examination, however, and the Justice held him to bail in the sum of $6,000. The defendant was sure he could obtain bail in Rock Island, and sent letters explaining his situation to several different and prominent parties in that city, asking them to become his sureties. Marshal KAUFFMANN conveyed the billet doux. But when A. P. M. struck no bailors had appeared, and ASKNOTT was taken to jail.

The defendant is a polite, genial man, and somewhat advanced in years. He is said to have dealt somewhat extensively among farmers in patent right swindles. That he is in the right place now is very patent.

The Field of Honor—A Duel in Cohoes.

From the Troy Times, Aug. 3.

Most people suppose that the code duello as a means of settling differences is confined to Southern latitudes, where the warm blood of the chivalry, impatient of restraint, finds vent, and wounded honor is healed, by a resort to personal conflict. Occasionally, however, when the weather is too warm to avenge an insult by the old-fashioned method of "fisticuffs," there may be found north of Mason and Dixon's line, those who prefer the less laborious and more effectual means of revenge afforded by mortal combat. Of this class were two doughty knights who happened to meet at Collier's Hotel, on Harmony Hill, a few days ago. They met in a friendly manner, chatted pleasantly and drank freely, but their beer made them argumentative, their arguments led to a quarrel; and if there had not been a great disparity in the size of the contestants, the quarrel would have resulted in blows, no doubt; but the friends of the parties persuaded them that by to a satisfactory conclusion, and the difference in size would be no advantage to either party, unless the smaller of the two were the better marksman. The "heavy weight" expressed himself willing to take the chances. His opponent making no objections, the preliminaries were arranged in seconds chosen, ground selected, weapons designated (pistols) and the combatants took their places. By the agreement they were to stand back to back, and, upon the word being given, to advance five paces, turn and fire. Accordingly, these reckless men, with slow, deliberate tread, each anxious for the other's bloodmarched to his doom. Assuming the designated position, the five paces were quickly stepped, and the fatal word given. With desperate energy both wheeled and fired almost simultaneously. But happily the deadly part of each pistol charge had been drawn by the owner, hence we have no bloody death to report. But at the instant of firing, MICHAEL REDMOND, who acted as second for one of the parties, threw a small pebble against the breast of his principal's opponent, who, supposing he was fatally wounded, fainted and fell. The other, seeing the effect of his shot, dropped his weapon and fled to the woods, and has not since been seen. The man who fell recovered soon afterward, and upon inquiry was told that his antagonist had been killed by his shot, and his mortal remains were then reposing beneath this cloth. This in turn alarmed the last "survivor," and he also fled to parts unknown. The contestants had not been long in the city, and were not extensively known, though from the above and some other developments respecting them, it is generally believed that their absence will not entail a heavy loss upon the public.

Reunion of a Family.

From the New-Bedford (Mass.) Mercury, Aug. 2.

Some excitement was created in the city, on Saturday, by the arrival here of a citizen of Norfolk, Va., in search of his children. Fourteen years ago, by the chances of slavery, a woman and her family were sold at auction. The buyer was the son of her master, and the father of her children, who gained possession of them by the payment of $1,400, and sent them to enjoy their freedom in Boston. Since Virginia became a State as free as Massachusetts, the woman has returned to her native place. One son has learned a machinist's trade in Boston, where he is now at work. On Saturday the father came to New-Bedford in search of the sister and brother. The former is happily situated in a family of Friends, and the boy, found at work in the shop of GEORGE H. MITCHELL, the hairdresser, was taken to join his mother in Virginia, where he will be educated and cared for.

Massachusetts Clairvoyants at Fault.

From the Boston Traveller, Aug. 2.

On the 20th of last March, and frequently afterward, several clairvoyants and trance mediums in East Boston personated the death of a young man whose spirit informed them that he had fallen from aloft on board the bark Nehemiah Gibson, then on her passage from Melbourne and New South Wales for San Francisco. In its full the spirit stated that its body had struck the rail of the vessel and after a few hours expired in great agony. The young man's family and all the leading Spiritualists of East Boston implicitly believed these wonderful revelations; but it seems that the young man arrived at San Francisco still in the body, and with a fair prospect of living his three score years and ten." We mention the case because it has been a common topic of conversation with the people of East Boston for several months.

MACOUPIN COUNTY TEN PER CENT. BONDS.—HOWES & MACY, No. 20 Wall-st., offer for sale bonds of Macoupin County, Illinois, issued for the building of a Court-house, bearing interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. Coupons payable semi-annually in New-York. These bonds are also semi-annually in New-York. These bonds are also

FINANCIAL.

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD FIRST MORTGAGE CONVERTIBLE BONDS OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company.

OF ILLINOIS,

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD AT THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, NEW-YORK. COUPONS PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER.

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

The Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad, upon whose property these bonds are issued, is now in process of construction, its termini being the Cities of Danville and Pekin, both in Illinois. The length of the road is 117 3-100 miles, its capital stock necessary to perfect a complete roadway has been already done, and the whole line is ready for the rails. These are rapidly being put down, and a portion of the road is now in successful operation. It is expected that the whole road will be completed early the coming autumn.

These bonds are convertible into stock at par at the option of the holder, and may be registered in the name of the owner at any time if desired. The total amount of bonds is limited to $2,000,000. The security offered is, as we shall show, the very best. Already sums nearly equal to the interest on these bonds to be issued have been expended on the road. The bonds, averaging less than $18,000 per mile, are secured by a first mortgage on the whole road and entire property of the company. The road runs east and west, on the line of the principal and oldest emigrant wagon road in the State, passing through several populous towns and cities, and the richest agricultural district in Illinois, in a word, through the garden of the Garden State. Its local business alone will suffice to make it a first-class paying road, while, with its connections with many principal lines, its through trade must be such as to make it one of the most profitable in the country.

The road will be consolidated with the line from Danville to Indianapolis, making a line of 216 miles. At Indianapolis connection will be made with all the lines to New-York and Baltimore; at Danville with the Toledo, Wabash and Western. In fact, the road will form a direct link in the direct communication of the principal Atlantic cities with southern Illinois, with Keokuk and Burlington, Iowa, and with Omaha and the Pacific.

It will complete a direct line from Boston to Peoria, Keokuk, Burlington, Omaha and the far West, via Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, and the Bellefontaine Railroad to Indianapolis and Lafayette.

It will form the most direct line from New-York to and Wabash and Western Railroad.

It will form the most direct line from New-York to Chicago, via the Erie, Atlantic and Great Western, the same points West via the New-York Central, Lake Shore and Bellefontaine Roads, to Indianapolis and Danville; or via the Erie, Atlantic and Great Western, to Dayton, Ohio; and via Indiana Central, to Indianapolis, Danville, Bloomington, &c., as well as from Philadelphia, via the Pennsylvania Central to Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton and Indianapolis.

It will form an important link in the communication of Baltimore and the South with the Great West, the Northwest and the Pacific via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to Parkersburg, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Danville and Peoria.

Thus, with the combined advantages of a certainty of a remunerative local business and a through business, which, as a connecting link to so many directing and principal points, it must necessarily have, it is reasonable to presume that the earnings of this road must exceed, in proportion to its length, those of any other railroad in Illinois. The following table shows the earnings of some of the principal railroads in Illinois:

Railroads.	Miles road.	Earnings per mile.
Chicago, Alton and St. Louis	220	$12,900
Chicago and Northwestern	1,153	11,670
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific	410	10,012
Chicago, Rock Island and Western	521	7,961
Toledo, Wabash and Western	708	10,125
Illinois Central	705	11,981

It is safe to estimate the receipts of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad for the first year at $12,000 per mile, or on 117.05 miles, $1,404,600.

FIRST YEAR.

Receipts, as estimated	$1,404,600
Estimated expenses as follows:
Operating expenses, 50 per cent	$702,300
Interest on $2,000,000 gold bonds, 7 per cent	140,000
Premium, 40 per cent. on $140,000 gold	56,000
Set aside as Sinking Fund	10,000— 908,300
Leaving a net profit over interest and expenses	$496,300

Or over 16 per cent. for dividends on the capital stock the first year of the operation. Without doubt, a present increase thereafter, each year, of the road is alone sufficient to convince all of its great value and usefulness.

The stock of the Rock Island and the Illinois Central, the Chicago and Alton, Burlington and Quincy Roads, are all selling at from above par to nearly 100, while none of them are much greater than this the competition with either is much greater than this can have. There is no reason why the stock of this road shall not sell as high as either of the above. Hence the privilege of converting the bonds into stock of this Company at par any time desired greatly increases their value.

After having personally and thoroughly examined this road, we accepted the agency for negotiating its bonds. We now offer them at 90 and accrued interest in currency. With the utmost confidence we recommend them as a reliable and safe security and profitable investment.

At the present price they pay 10 per cent. currency, over 45 per cent. more than the same amount invested in Five-twenty Bonds—besides the advantage of being free from tax, and the prospect of a speedy advance in the stock of the road on completion, into which they may be converted.

Government Bonds and Gold received at their market value in exchange without commission. Bonds forwarded by express free of charges.

FINANCIAL.

A PACIFIC RAILWAY GOLD LOAN

$6,500,000.

We beg leave to announce that we have accepted the agency of the

KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

For the sale of its

New Seven Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Loan, Free of Tax.

This Loan amounts to $6,500,000,

First Mortgage Land-Grant and Sinking Fund Bonds,

secured upon the extension of the Railway from near Sheridan, in Kansas, to Denver, Colorado, a distance of 337 miles, of which twelve miles are completed, and the rest is under construction. It is also a mortgage upon the rolling stock and franchise of this first-class railway now running through the State of Kansas.

And in successful operation for 437 miles west of the Missouri River, and earning already enough to meet all of its expenses and existing obligations, besides

More than the Interest upon this new Loan.

In addition to this the bonds are also secured by a first mortgage of the Government Land Grant of three million acres, extending in alternate sections on either side of the track, from the 394th mile post in Kansas to Denver. The proceeds of the sale of these lands are to be invested by the Trustees in the 7 per cent. Bonds themselves up to 120, or in United States Bonds as

A Sinking Fund for the redemption of the Bonds.

The lands embrace some of the finest portions of the magnificent Territory of Colorado, including a coal field and pinery. The Company also holds as an asset another tract of and although not pledged as a security for this loan, their possession adds largely to the Company's wealth and credit. We estimate the Value of the Company's Property, Covered by This Mortgage, at $23,000,000, Net, While the Loan is Merely $6,500,000.

The bonds have

THIRTY YEARS TO RUN,

from May 1, 1869, and will pay

SEVEN PER CENT. INTEREST IN GOLD,

semi-annually, on May 1 and Nov.

THE SARATOGA RACES.

The Cup Day—Large and Fashionable Attendance—Fine Weather and Splendid Racing—Mitchell Wins the Hurdle Race, Bayonet the Saratoga Cup, and Fanny Ludlow the Third Race.

From Our Special Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Thursday, Aug. 5, 1869.

The morning of the Cup day dawned bright and promising after the heavy rain of the preceding evening, and although dense masses of dark clouds gathered overhead about 10 o'clock, yet when the racing commenced at midday the sun came out, and they disappeared before his enlivening rays. The largest and most brilliant concourse ever gathered on the Saratoga Race-course was congregated in the grand stand, and the presence of large numbers of elegantly-attired ladies, the élite of the fashionable society of the continent, added to the charm of the scene. The prospect from the stand was one of surpassing loveliness, commanding a magnificent view of the Catskill and Green Mountains, valled in a purple haze in the far distance. The judges, timers and starters were the same as on the previous day, and all discharged their duties in the most satisfactory manner.

THE HURDLE RACE

was the first event on the card, and was over two miles and eight hurdles, for a purse of $400 for the winner, and $100 for the second horse. The starters were C. LITTLEFIELD'S b. c. Mitchell, 3 years, ridden by HUGH GAFFNEY, carrying 125 pounds; JAMES THOMPSON'S b. m. Lobella, 6 years, 154 pounds, ridden by Captain ELWES, and Colonel MCDANIELS' b. h. Ripley, 6 years, 156 pounds, Lobella was the favorite against the field at $100 to $60, for she looked in far better condition than when she ran and was beaten by Mitchell at Prospect Park. Mitchell took a strong lead, at the start, and led twenty lengths at the second hurdle, Lobella being second, two lengths before Mitchell. Lobella reduced the gap to ten lengths at the third hurdle, and at the next one was only four lengths behind; Ripley twenty lengths in the rear. All the horses took the leaps in fine style, amid the excitement and delight of the spectators. Passing the judges' stand, Mitchell was six lengths before the favorite, and at the next hurdle, at the end of the grand stand, he shied but GAFFNEY kept him straight and he took it cleverly. He opened another gap of four lengths along the backstretch, which Lobella reduced one-half on the lower side. An exciting race up the homestretch ensued, Mitchell taking the last hurdle two lengths before Lobella, and winning the race by that distance in 4:03¼. Ripley was twenty lengths behind.

THE SARATOGA CUP.

The great race of the meeting, on which thousands upon thousands of dollars were dependent, came next. It was a race for all ages, $50 entrance, play or pay, with $1,600 added, and six horses started. These were Captain MOORE'S b. c. Bayonet, 4 years; MCCONNELL & THOMPSON'S b. c. Vauxhall, 4 years; J. W. WELDON'S ch. h. Local, 6 years; R. W. WALDEN'S b. m. Sleety, 5 years; J. J. O'FALLON'S ch. h. Plantagenet, 5 years; and J. W. PENNOCK'S b. f. Nellie McDonald, 4 years. The betting was even on Bayonet against the field, and in the pool, sold before the start, he brought $1,400, Vauxhall $600, Nellie $200, Plantagenet, $140; Local and Sleety, $80. The start, which took place from the three-quarter pole, was delayed in consequence of several false attempts, and when the flag fell Sleety was the first off, followed by Bayonet and Plantagenet, and the others in a cluster behind. As they passed the stand Plantagenet was slightly leading, Sleety second, Nellie McDonald third, Bayonet next and Local last. At the quarter-pole Plantagenet was a neck in front of Sleety, who was a length before Bayonet, with Vauxhall at his quarters. They all ran in a cluster along the far side, and as the half-mile was passed, Plantagenet and Sleety were in front, with Bayonet and Nellie McDonald close up, and Local in the rear. On the lower stretch Bayonet took the second place with Vauxhall at his quarters, and as they went under the string, Bayonet and Plantagenet were head and head, with Vauxhall third, and the rest strung out. Going around the turn Vauxhall's stirrup leather broke, and he fell back, the favorite, Plantagenet, and Nellie being locked together. Before they reached the quarter-pole Bayonet went in front, and led a length at that point, with Plantagenet half a length before Nellie McDonald. The favorite steadily increased his lead along the backstretch, and without ever being headed galloped home a winner by four lengths; Vauxhall, who came with a terrific rush on the homestretch, gaining the second place, and Nellie McDonald the third. Time—4:10.

After the race for the cup was over the judges took considerable time for deliberation before announcing their decision. The peculiar manner in which Vauxhall was ridden by JOHN FORD created a general suspicion that he had prevented the horse from winning, for, after losing considerable ground and falling far behind in coming up the homestretch, he brought him out with such a tremendous rush that he passed some of the other horses as if they were standing still, and although Bayonet was too far in front to be overhanded, he finished second, and within four lenghts of him. Parties interested in Vauxhall's success were loud in their expressions that he had been pulled back, and that he could have won the race to a certainty. This, however, is a matter of conjecture only, for Bayonet won with great ease, and without ever being extended to his utmost speed in any part of the race. The time, four minutes and ten seconds, shows that it was not a fast race, for Vauxhall had ran a two-mile trial on the preceding Tuesday morning in 3:37, which was much faster than the race to-day, and was prima facie evidence that he had not run his best.

The greatest excitement prevailed when at last the judges announced that Bayonet had won the cup, but that all bets and pools must remain in abeyance until the judges and the Association had deliberated over the matter as to the ulterior steps to be taken, and that their decision would be given the following day at 12 o'clock M. After the last race to-day, however, they assembled in the Secretary's office, and called before them EDWARD THOMPSON and JOHN FORD, the trainer and rider of Vauxhall. After hearing their evidence and explanation of the horse's seemingly unaccountable running in the race, the judges announced the following declaration:

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 5, 1869.

In the Saratoga Cup Race, in consequence of the fraudulent riding of JOHN FORD, the rider of Vauxhall, in the race, all bets, pools and otherwise on or against Vauxhall, or a field in which Vauxhall is included, are drawn and declared "off," and that JOHN FORD is ruled off the course for fraudulent riding.

(Signed) ODEN BOWIE, }
F. T. BAYARD, } Judges.
C. W. WOOLEY, }

This decision created the greatest excitement among turfmen, especially among the backers of Bayonet, who in many cases had drawn their winnings, and by this judgment were compelled to refund them. In pools the backers of Vauxhall received their money back, the backers of Bayonet only receiving the pool money on the other horses in the field. The betting at the start was even on Bayonet against the field, but all such bets were now declared void. In rendering their decision, the judges and Association were actuated solely by a desire to discountenance wrong and misdoing, and protect the interests and pockets of the public, and they deserve credit for their action in the matter.

THE THREE-QUARTER-MILE DASH.

The third race of the day was a three-quarter-mile dash for a purse of $600. The entries were Sanford, (formerly the Uncle Vic colt,) Fanny Ludlow, Bobby Malone, Athlone, Lizzie Rogers and Legatee. Sanford was the favorite, selling in pools for $600, Fanny Ludlow bringing $240, Athlone $180, Bobby Malone $100, and Legatee and Lizzie Rogers coupled $120. Fanny Ludlow got off first, with Athlone and Lizzie Rogers next, and the favorite and Legatee last. Fanny took a strong lead which she retained throughout, and won easily by two lengths, Sanford being second, Legatee third, and the rest unplaced. Time—1:18.

The betting stood three to one against Kennington, two to one against Polly Perkins' sister, and four to one against Countryman. Eight ran.

POLITICAL.

Twenty-second-street Republican General Committee.

A regular monthly meeting of this Committee was held at the headquarters, Broadway and Twenty-second-street, last evening, the Chairman, J. V. GRIDLEY, presiding.

Dr. F. A. THOMAS, a member of the Committee, sent in his resignation, which was accepted, and JAMES B. TAYLOR was elected in his place.

A resolution indorsing the Eight-hour law, and requesting the Republican organizations of the City to nominate no man for the Legislature who was not in its favor, was adopted.

JAMES W. CULVER offered a resolution appointing a committee of investigation to examine and report on the rumors that certain members of this Committee had joined another organization antagonistic to the one represented by this Committee.

Mr. A. J. H. DUGANNE hoped the Committee would report not only on the fact, but also on the causes that had led to the present disruption of this Republican organization, for that there was a disruption was now evident, although the idea of such a thing had been scouted by the gentleman (Mr. CULVER) at the last meeting of the Committee.

Mr. ROBERTS was in favor of the Committee. If there were deserters from the organization, let them be turned out and better men put in their places. If they wanted to join the Twenty-third-street organization, let them do so, or if they wanted to form a third organization, let them do that; but this organization, which he was glad to see was the only one recognized by the National Administration, should maintain itself intact, and go up to the State Convention, as they had done heretofore, representing the true organization of the Republican Party of this City.

Mr. JAS. M. THOMPSON indorsed the remarks of Mr. ROBERTS, and said he could name some of the men engaged in forming this third organization, who did their best to promote the election of A. OAKEY HALL to the Mayoralty. He was in favor of weeding out of the organization all disaffected persons and "sore heads," and going up to the State Convention a united body, and he was sure they would be admitted as representing the real Republican Party of the City, the same as they had been in years past.

Mr. JOHN WHITE moved an amendment that the Committee also report what steps, if any, should be taken to harmonize the party in this City. Recognizing, as they all did, that this was the genuine regular Republican organization of the City, they could afford to be magnanimous.

Mr. CULVER accepted the amendment to his resolution, proposed by Mr. WHITE, and it was adopted without opposition.

The Committee then adjourned.

Mozart Hall General Committee.

A regular monthly meeting of the Mozart Hall General Committee was held last evening at the new headquarters, No. 701 Broadway, with EDWARD BERRIAN presiding, and JOSEPH J. MCCARTY, Secretary. A motion was introduced and carried, to the effect that the Mozart Hall Democracy deemed it unadvisable to send delegates to the State Nominating Convention at Albany next month. It was also resolved that the Chairmen of the several Ward Committees be directed to hand in the names of the officers and the location of the headquarters of those Committees at the next session of the General Committee, after which the meeting adjourned.

Twenty-third-street Republican General Committee.

The monthly meeting of the Twenty-third-street Republican Committee was not held last evening, owing to the absence from town of a large portion of the members. The next regular meeting of the Committee will be held on the evening of the first Thursday in September.

The New-Jersey Central Railroad Improvements.

The Committees appointed by the citizens' meetings and the Common Councils of Jersey City and Bergen, and that appointed by the Hudson County Freeholders, to secure the abatement of the nuisance caused by the dumping of garbage on the shore below Jersey City, for the purpose of "making land," was held at the office of the Mayor of Jersey City last evening.

The report of a special committee was presented reciting the incidents of a meeting with Mr. SIDNEY DILLON, the Acting President of the Central Railroad, at which a promise was made that disinfectants should be used with every scow-load of refuse dumped upon the shore or upon the island, that during the months of warm weather the dumping should be discontinued on the shore, and that the garbage should be taken to the island. Dr. YOUBIN, who was appointed to visit the grounds to inspect the operations of the Company, and to see what were the disinfectants used, reported that the island of "Black Tom" was surrounded with "crib-work," which protected the refuse matter deposited there, and that the island was covered with disinfectants. He recommended that a committee be appointed to visit and inspect, periodically, the scene of the Company's operations, to see that the promises of the Company are faithfully carried out.

The reports were adopted; the Committees were instructed to inspect the grounds and enforce as far as possible the obligations entered into by the Company; and the meeting adjourned to meet again at the call of the President.

The Claims of Cuban Fillibusters.

The Cuban Junta is charged with having refused to reimburse certain officers of the late filibustering expedition for the time and money which they lost while engaged in the Cuban service. Many of those who were imprisoned in Ludlow-street Jail, including MICHAELOWSHY, CLANCY, NORRIS, HARMON, BEMAN, CONANT, and others, made a visit to the Junta, after their release, endeavoring to get back the moneys they had expended in organizing and equipping men for the revolutionary army, but failed to receive any satisfaction. The fillibusters who were captured at Gardiner's Island, and were subsequently released from Fort Lafayette, were partially indemnified for their trouble and martyrdom. The sum of $50 was paid to each private, while the officers were given $5 additional. At the time they were paid, they were required to sign an agreement relinquishing all claims against the Junta. Several lawyers have since decided that claims for expenses can be recovered in the Courts, to which the matter is likely to be carried.

SING SING PRISON.

Presentment of the Grand Jury—Management of Affairs in the Prison—The County Jail.

An adjourned term of the Court of General Sessions for Westchester County, was held at the old Court-house, Bedford, yesterday, before Hon. ROBERT COCHRAN, County Judge, and Justices SILKMAN and CONKLIN, for the purpose of receiving from the Grand Jury the following presentment in relation to the management of the affairs at the State Prison, Sing Sing, and the escape of convicts therefrom; also in reference to the lack of proper accommodations in the County Jail, at White Plains:

To the Court of Sessions of Westchester County:

The Grand Jurors of the People of the State of New-York, in and for the County of Westchester, do respectfully present:

That, in accordance with the charge of His Honor the County Judge, and by direction of the Court, the Grand Jury visited Sing Sing, and made such investigations of the affairs at the State Prison there as time and opportunity allowed.

Witnesses were examined, consisting of the agent and warden, clerk, physician, keepers past and present, guards past and present, superintendent of the quarries and lime works, chiefs of various departments, and citizens of the town.

The summary of the evidence we respectfully beg leave to submit to the Court as follows:

As to the escape of convicts, we find that since the present agent and warden took possession of the office, Jan. 26, 1869, eleven convicts have escaped from the prison. Of these, five have been retaken and six are still at large. Sixteen have made attempts to escape, but have not succeeded in getting beyond the reach of the guards and keepers.

When a convict is known to have escaped, or it is supposed that one has secreted himself, the convicts are immediately locked up in their cells, if not already in them, and the whole force at the disposal of the Warden is employed in the search for the missing party. Intelligence of the escape having been already telegraphed to all the various cities and chief police stations through the country, and thorough search is made with variable results.

We find from the records of the State Prison that fourteen convicts escaped from the Prison during the year 1868 who were not recaptured that year. Two of these, however, have been recaptured during the present year.

We also find that the disposable means at the command of the principal officers of the prison to prevent escapes and enforce discipline are manifestly insufficient. The number of guards now by law allowed to be employed at the prison is only thirty; the same number that was allowed fifteen years ago, when the number of convicts was less than 800, while there are at the present time about 1,250 male convicts and about 120 females in the prison. We believe that the number of guards should be increased so as somewhat to correspond with the increased number of convicts, or otherwise the grounds should be walled in.

It is impossible, under present arrangements, to prevent occasional escapes, and the knowledge of this fact cannot produce other than a bad influence on the minds of the convicts, operating against their proper subjection to discipline, and suggesting frequent attempts to escape.

We find, also, in respect to the late revolt on July 8, 1869, that there was a general discontent among a large portion of the male convicts—say about one-half—and that these were partially influenced by a few ringleaders, probably 30 to 40; that the disturbance began on Thursday, July 8, and was not fully quelled until Monday or Thursday following, but we believe that the magnitude and character of said revolts have been much exaggerated in the published statements.

We have been unable to ascertain any definite reason for the revolt, but believe that a variety of causes have contributed to this result, among which we mention:

First—The sweeping changes of officers, and especially of keepers, with every change of political power, by which new men are introduced, with new ideas, and frequently without experience, and in this instance, as in former cases, has worked injury to the discipline of the prison.

Second—The abolishing of the various forms of punishment now prohibited by law, which practically weakens the officers and strengthens the convicts.

Third—The influence of the Prison Association we believe to be injurious in this respect—that it contributes to a false sympathy on the part of the community which eventually results in the convicts being regarded as objects of sympathy and pity rather than offenders against the peace and welfare of the community; and this on coming to the knowledge of the prisoners, (as it certainly does more or less,) causes a general discontent.

Considerable has been said about the insufficient quantity and bad quality of food; but we believe these complaints are entirely without foundation. As a general rule, judging from all the evidence, we believe the quality of the food and the general discipline are not at present below the standard that has prevailed in former years.

In reference to punishment of convicts for breaches of prison discipline, the Legislature at its last session passed an act abolishing the shower-bath, a mode of punishment greatly dreaded by the convicts. Immediately after the passage of the act, insubordination was developed among the prisoners, and many unruly convicts, who had been kept within bounds by the fear of the shower, became troublesome.

The same state of affairs appears to have followed the abolition of whipping with the cat, a number of years since.

The only punishments now resorted to are the hooks, iron helmets, and solitary confinement. The physician of the prison is decidedly of the opinion that solitary confinement in dark cells, on bread and water, is a much more dangerous punishment than either the cat or shower-bath, and much more injurious to the person subjected to the punishment. It is the opinion of the Grand Jury that proper discipline cannot be maintained unless the restrictions now existing shall be wholly or in part removed. As to rewards for good behavior, we find that by the statutes of the State a well-behaved convict may be considerably reduce the period of his sentence. Should he, after a few years of good behavior, be guilty of a flagrant violation of rules, he is deprived of this good conduct commutation.

Convicts are allowed remuneration for overwork in most of the contract shops. Cases have been known where a convict has accumulated over two hundred dollars by this system of overwork, which amount is paid to him on the expiration of the term of his sentence. In some shops no system of overwork is allowed, and this produces jealousy and discontent on the part of those deprived of this privilege.

On a review of the whole subject, with as much care as the nature of the circumstances and the time allowed as would permit, we feel bound to say that we find no special reason for censure of any of the officers at present employed. But we do feel and believe the whole influence of political party machinery as brought to bear on prison matters under existing laws, works only evil to prison management and prison discipline. Under the working of this party machinery, when any change of political administration occurs, at once a host of applicants besiege the new Board of Inspectors, each claiming an appointment for services rendered. The leverage of political influence thus brought to bear is so powerful that it is almost impossible to resist it; and it is equally difficult to avoid making some appointments that are not fit to be made.

The low rate of wages paid brings comparatively few men as applicants who are thoroughly competent for the work.

In view of these facts, we welcome any influences that will tend to hinder frequent and sweeping changes of officers for causes other than for incompetency and inefficiency.

We also feel and believe that only such men should be appointed to the principal offices as are worthy of entire confidence, and that they should be intrusted with full power. We cannot forget that here are a large number of men, many of them criminals of the worst class, daring, reckless and skillful, and all guilty of crime. To place men here who are not worthy of the fullest confidence, and then restrict them in the means which may be used to enforce discipline and order, is the height of folly and danger.

In what has been said about the Prison Association, we do not intend to cast any reflections on the members thereof or their motives, for these we believe to be pure.

But we desire to reach that sentiment (largely pervading our communities, and which we believe to be cherished and strengthened by the well-meant efforts to ameliorate the condition of criminals,) which, in its sympathy for the poor criminal, so far forgets both his guilt and the wrong done to society.

The Mast Hope Disaster—Griffin Discharged on Bail.

From Our Special Correspondent.

MILFORD, Penn., Thursday, Aug. 5.

JAMES GRIFFIN, who has been lying in jail at this place since his arrest on the warrant of the Coroner of Pike County, for his alleged culpable carelessness in running his engine from the switch on the main track while a passenger train was passing, thereby causing the Mast Hope disaster, was released on bail yesterday afternoon. Judge SHARSWOOD, of the Supreme Court, having fixed the prisoner's bail at $5,000, and appointed the 4th of August as the time on which his sureties were to appear, yesterday, C. A. MILLER, a private banker of Susquehanna Depot, Penn., and JAMES CREEGAN, of Port Jervis, came forward and gave bonds in the sum required, for the appearance of GRIFFIN at the September term of the Pike County Oyer and Terminer, at which the usual final charges which will be then brought against him in connection with the Mast Hope slaughter.

The wife of GRIFFIN was present, and, in company with their friends, they started immediately for their home at Susquehanna Depot. The prisoner looks careworn and thin.

THE PHILADELPHIA FIRE.

Burning of Bonded Warehouses—Thousands of Barrels of Whisky Destroyed—Shipping in Danger—Loss Millions—Persons Injured.

From the Philadelphia Ledger, Aug. 5.

Last evening, about 7 o'clock, a fire broke out in Section H of Colonel WILLIAM C. PATTERSON'S bonded warehouses, at Front and Lombard streets, destroying an immense amount of property. There were numerous statements as to the origin of the fire, but the following account, obtained from two different parties, who were near the building, is believed to be correct:

The warehouses are divided into eight sections, lettered from A to H, inclusive, and having a front of 220 feet on Front-street, and running back 135 feet, all seven stories high, except Section H, which was six. Each was supposed to be completely fire-proof, and built without connection with each other, and therefore supposed to be perfectly safe from destruction by fire. Section H, in which the fire originated, was 40 by 135 feet, and fronted on Lombard, Penn and Front streets. About ten minutes before the fire, a large portion of the wall on Lombard-street fell to the pavement with a loud crash supposed to have been pushed out by the weight upon the floors.

The whisky stored went down with the ruins, and in a few moments a terrific explosion took place, throwing down every wall of section H, scattering bricks, timbers, &c., in every direction, while the flames shot up in a solid body far above the surrounding buildings, creating a general consternation among the residents of the neighboord, for it was soon rumored that a number of children had been killed, and several men badly if not fatally hurt. Women were running around frantically to find children that had left their houses, but as those who were missing began to return, the excitement somewhat abated.

The explosion, of course, set the entire contents of the warehouse on fire, and soon burning whisky ran down the gutters in Swanson-street to Pine, and thence into the sewer leading to the river, and in a short time an explosion took place in the sewer, breaking a portion of it; but not doing any very great damage; the flames continued, however, through the sewer to the end of the wharf, which it set on fire, and came near firing a brig lying near the pier, but fortunately a steam tug happened to be close by, which towed the brig out of danger.

The engine and two boilers, said to be nearly new, are located under the pavement at Front and Lombard streets, and were completely isolated from Section H by heavy doors, and as the engine had not been run yesterday and the fires banked up, it is not to be presumed that the fire was caused by an explosion of the boiler, as was thought by many, but that when the wall of the building fell, letting the barrels down and staving the casks, the whisky made its way into the vaults containing the boilers and furnaces, and, setting it on fire, thus caused the explosion. When the wall on Lombard-street fell the roof was left hanging in position, but, when the explosion took place, all the walls and the roof fell to the ground, exposing the walls of the next section, from the roof to the pavement. The bricks were piled eight or ten feet high in Lombard and other streets adjoining.

The firemen were soon on the ground and worked with great zeal and energy, not only to check the flames pouring forth from the destroyed building, but to save the surrounding property, and at 8:30 o'clock it was thought the flames were under control, and that the other sections of the warehouse would be saved. A number of parties, among whom was the son of Colonel PATTERSON, the Colonel being very ill at his home, left the ground, believing that no further danger need be apprehended. By this time they had arrived at Sixth and Chesnut streets, the flames broke out in section G, one of the seven-storied building, and in a very shot time the contents of the warehouse was one mass of fire, the flames shooting up far above the roof of the building and lighting up the streets and buildings for squares around, while each spar and rope, upon the numerous vessels along the wharves, were brought out to view with great distinctness. Firemen and citizens, who had not been apprised of the first fire, now flocked to the scene, crowding the thoroughfares in that vicinity to such a degree that it was almost impossible to get within several squares of the scene of conflagration.

About 9 o'clock the fire had made its way to Section F, reaching this building by the iron sheeting along the edge of the roof, and in a very short time the side wall fell, and in a few moments thereafter the front wall came down, with a loud crash, creating an intense excitement.

A general alarm of fire was then sounded by the State-house bell, bringing out the entire Fire Department, and increasing the throng of sightseers to such a degree that all attempts to get through the throng were fruitless. In the meantime messages were sent to the neighboring Station-houses for Police, and shortly a large number of them arrived, and formed a cordon around the buildings so as to keep the crowd as far from danger as possible. The flames continued to spread, and a general alarm was again sounded.

By 12 o'clock, the flames had spread through the entire block, and were still burning as furiously as at any time during the evening, threatening the destruction of the dwellings and drinking-houses on Lombard-street, on the opposite side of the warehouses and Pine-street, and extending from Penn to Front-street. There were five dwellings on Front-street, three only being occupied. The corner was in the occupancy of MR. BROWN, tavern-keeper; below him, on Pine-street, was the shop of WILLIAM THOMPSON, the lager-beer saloon of JACOB SHOEMAKER, and the tavern and boarding-house of Mr. GILROY; the Mexico House and one or two other drinking-houses on Penn-street. All the occupants removed their effects from these soon after the fire broke out, fearing that the flames could not be checked.

Among those injured at the time of the explosion was a Mr. ISAAC UNDERDOWN, oil clothing manufacturer, face cut by bricks. One of the door bars blew across the street and demolished the bulk window of Mr. UNDERDOWN'S store, and landed in the rear part of the store, and nearly striking Mr. UNDERDOWN in the head. Mr. THOS. MAGUIRE, shipping master, was thrown down by the force of the explosion, and his wrist badly sprained. One little girl had her head badly cut.

MICHAEL MCNULTY, 40 years old, residing in Monroe-street, was driving along Penn-street on a dray at the time the warehouse fell. Some of the flying bricks struck him and knocked him off the dray, and the horse started off at the same moment. MCNULTY crawled out of the way, but he was hit by bricks and timber and considerably bruised. He was removed to the hospital, and at a late hour was quite easy.

WM. LONG, a young man, residing in the neighborhood of the fire, was struck by some bricks and had one of his arms broken. He was removed to the hospital.

Policeman DANIEL HAGERTY, of the Third District, was reported to be severely burned in one of his hands.

ALBERT BRIEST, a member of the Hope Engine Company, fell from a ladder, on Front-street, and was severely bruised. He was taken to the hospital.

THOMAS PRESTON, colored, residing at Tenth and Rodman streets, was badly scalded at the fire.

JAMES MCGRADE, 8 years old, residing at No. 1,712 Plover-street, was run over by an engine, and had an ankle fractured.

JACOB ANDREWS, living in Penn-street, below Lombard, had his head badly injured by falling bricks.

GEORGE STEWART, a member of the Lafayette Hose Company, residing in Fourth-street, above Brown, was taken from the upper part of one of the burning buildings on Front-street, nearly suffocated. He was then removed to the Second-street Market-house, where restoratives were applied, but at the time of leaving the place, between 1 and 2 o'clock, but little hope was entertained of his recovery.

EDWARD ALBURGH, residing at No. 316 Emmet-street, was badly injured in the head by a ladder falling on him. (Died Thursday.)
